Fought Rantoul for Poison Bag

REOPEN RANTOUL DIVORCE

A double struggle with her husband, Edward L. Rantoul, first to retain possession of her wedding ring and next to prevent him getting a bag of poison, was described at East Cambridge today by Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, granddaughter of the poet James Russell Lowell, in her renewed divorce suit.

Among the new allegations made by Mrs. Rantoul, exceeding even the testimony she gave at the previous divorce hearing were these:

"In the Summer of 1911, while we were the guests of James M. Codman, Jr., at Wareham, Mr. Rantoul crashed into my room and tried to wrench my wedding ring from my finger. I prevented him from getting it by sitting on my hand.

"Then he tried to get a bag from my bureau in which I kept strychnine. I kept the bag by winding its straps around my hand.

"He said, 'I want to kill myself!'

"On a second visit to Wareham Mr. Rantoul called me into his room and grabbed a razor from the bureau. I called for Mr. Stevenson, one of the guests. Mr. Stevenson came up and talked with Mr. Rantoul and I was forced to take Mr. Stevenson's room in that wing of the house, while Mr. Stevenson slept in my room.

CALLED HER NAMES.

"He repeatedly called me a 'low, vile woman,' a 'street-walker' and 'down in the gutter, covered with mud.'

"He said I was not a fit woman to be the mother of our two children.

"These abuses and attacks terrified me and greatly undermined my health.

"On Labor Day, in 1911, we were at Newport for the tennis. Mr. Rantoul used abusive language and repeated his old saying that I was a a 'low, vile woman' a 'street-walker' and 'down in the gutter, covered with mud.'

"He said this in the presence of our little daughters, Mabel and Harriett. He said it was about time the children knew what kind of a woman I was, and I sent them out of the room."

This is the second trial of the famous Rantoul case. Edward L. Rantoul is a rich Boston clubman, descendant of a fine old North Shore family. Mrs. Rantoul, as the granddaughter of the poet Lowell, is of notable lineage.

RAILROAD RATE CASE DECISION BY JUNE 15

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The Eastern advance rate case providing for a 5 per cent. increase in freight rates will be decided by the Interstate Commerce Commission before the Summer recess, about June 15. This announcement was made today by Commissioner Harland at the hearing of shippers and attorneys on increased rates on plaster.

In making the announcement Commissioner Harlan explained that the action of the commission in further suspending the proposed increase seems to have been misunderstood.

"It has no significance," he said, "except that the case is not ready for decision. Neither the railroads nor the shippers have completed their respective arguments and testimony. The commission is fully cognizant of the importance of this case and is making every effort to bring about a speedy decision."

Chairman Clark of the commission had an interview with President Wilson yesterday and it was reported that the chief executive urged the commission to devote its entire attention to this case in order that decisive action may be had at the earliest possible time.

It was stated by Commissioner Harlan that the commission is considering whether the revenues of the railroads are adequate and if not how they can be supplemented. He explained that the commission has addressed inquiries to the carriers as well as to the shippers and that all their answers have not yet been received. Pending a complete report on these points the commission took up the complaints of individual shippers.

ANOTHER STIFF DOSE OF WINTER

Plenty of snow for Boston today and a cold wave tomorrow.

That's the local weather prospect and Boston seems to be getting out of it easy so far, judging from the weather wails from New York and other points.

A light but steady snow storm, which set in at 1 a. m., kept up through the daytime, adding its layers to the heavy foundation of snow already deposited by the late blizzard.

The storm prevails north of Alabama and Georgia and as far west as the Mississippi.

The forecast for Boston and vicinity is:

Snow tonight, Friday fair and much colder. Increasing north to northwesterly winds.

Southern New England and New York suffered greatly today from sleet. Ice-coated rails made traffic trouble. New Haven and Hartford reported rain and freezing.

One death is reported from New York. A Long Island brakeman slipped on the ice and fell under a train.

Throughout last night the temperature in Boston remained about stationary between 25 and 29 above zero, and at 8 a. m. the official thermometer registered 29 degrees, with a wind velocity of fourteen miles an hour from the northeast.

All New England was much warmer last night than it has been for more than a week. The lowest temperatures reported from it at the Weather Bureau stations were 2 below at Greenville, Me., and zero at Northfield, Vt. West from Chicago as far as Montana and as far South as St. Louis all the stations reported readings well below zero. The reading at White River, Ont., was 36 below.

NEW STORM ADDS TO DAMAGE AND DELAY IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—One death resulted from the storm today when H. Schulman, a flagman of the Long Island Railroad, slipped and fell under a train and was killed at Elmhurst.

New York's cup of misery overflowed when a rain and sleet storm struck the city in the wake of two recent blizzards, adding to the already congested condition of traffic. The rain froze as it fell and soon the streets were coated with a sheet of ice, making walking an exciting operation.

From the Battery to the Bronx and all over Brooklyn persons were flopping about acrobatically in the streets, tangoing, banjoing and knocking the miserable condition of street railway traffic. But for the fact that the rain froze it would have done more to clear the snow-filled streets than Street Commissioner Featherston's twenty thousand shovellers. In hundreds of streets the piled up drifts have not yet been touched.

Vehicular traffic was badly hampered and many horses were hurt by falling. The street railway companies were laboring under difficulties when this new handicap beset them. Both the elevated and surface lines were hard hit and thousands of persons were late for work.

U. S. ENVOY IS ARMED TO KILL

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 19.—Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge d'affaires, today threatened to shoot Diaz Miron, editor of El Imparcial, the Huertista newspaper, which has been vilifying President Wilson, if the editor accosts him. O'Shaughnessy backed up his threat by carrying a pistol and by displaying another within easy reach on his desk in the embassy.

A telegram from Secretary of State Bryan was received by O'Shaughnessy, commending the charge for resenting the insults of El Imparcial and assuring him that the American government would give O'Shaughnessy and his family all the protection necessary.

O'Shaughnessy armed himself against Miron because of open threats against him made by the editor. The American diplomat twice complained to General Huerta about scurrilous editorials in El Imparcial, attacking President Wilson, and Huerta ordered Miron to stop them. That incensed Miron and he made his threats to "get" O'Shaughnessy.

"I am armed and I will shoot Diaz Miron if he accosts me, here or elsewhere," O'Shaughnessy said.

Today is the first anniversary of Victoriano Huerta's assumption of the provisional presidency, following the Felix Diaz revolution that brought about the assassination of President Madero and Vice-President Suarez. The day was mildly celebrated, but there was not much demonstration because of the presence of troops everywhere throughout the city.

Huerta commemorated the anniversary by personally decorating the troops of the Twenty-Ninth Regiment, his bodyguard, for their loyalty to him during the year of his tenure.

Approaching Huerta in one of his lighter moods, amid the flowers, music, gayety and wine of a reception at the Huerta home, O'Shaughnessy obtained the dictator's promise to establish a neutral zone for foreigners during the approaching rebel attack on Torreon.

The State Department at Washington is said to be trying to extract a similar agreement from General Pancho Villa, the Constitutionalist commander.

27 MEMBERS OF CASTILLO'S BANDIT BAND EXECUTED

NACHITA, N. M., Feb. 19.—Maximo Castillo's bandit band has been exterminated. Twenty-seven members of the gang accused of killing more than two score Mexicans and Americans in the Big Cumbre tunnel were captured on Mexican soil by soldiers of General Villa.

According to couriers who arrived here early in the day, all the twenty-seven were executed immediately.

The bandits were captured while fleeing to the American border, hoping to find refuge in the United States from closely pressing bands of Constitutionalist troops, headed by Major Miguel Samaniego and Captain Juan Talmantes. They were overtaken at Espia, twenty miles southeast of Dog Springs.

When the news of the death of his followers was taken to Castillo, he showed the first signs of emotion since his arrest by American troops.

"My boys were not murderers," he said in a breaking voice. "The Cumbre disaster was caused by Villa's own men and he put the blame on my loyal men to shield himself and his troops."

Swordfish Catch Largest in History

The annual report of Frederick F. Mackerel receipts were the largest since 1905, and the swordfish catch was the biggest in the history of the bureau.

LAWYERS GATHER AT CONCORD IN FIGHT OVER FUGITIVE

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 19.—Harry K. Thaw's attorneys gathered in Concord today for a great council of war, to lay plans for their battle with William Travers Jerome when Judge Edgar Aldrich tomorrow holds a final hearing on the Thaw petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The attorneys sprang a surprise by announcing that they would not for the present press their demand that Thaw be released on bail. Former Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, Thaw's counsel-in-chief, today issued the following statement:

CONFIDENT OF THAW'S LIBERTY.

"I expect the hearing tomorrow to be devoted exclusively to the question of the writ of habeas corpus. We are confident the writ will be granted, and that Thaw will be freed. If the writ is not granted it will be time enough to take up the question of bail as an afterthought."

Thaw himself was busy today arranging the conference for this afternoon, and laying plans for the hearing. His mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, was expected in Concord late today, and she comes with the confident hope that soon she will be allowed to take her son home with her.

William Travers Jerome of New York, with Attorney General Thomas Carmody and Franklin Kennedy, is expected in Concord tomorrow morning. Jerome has said: "I will vigorously oppose Thaw's request for bail, if it pushed, and I will fight to the end against the granting of the habeas corpus petition."

JEROME "CAN'T CREDIT."

"I shall certainly take an appeal if the decision is against us. We filed briefs two months ago, denying the right of a Federal judge to step in after the Governor and the State had settled the case, and I believe our contention would be sustained.

"It is obvious to every one that if Harry Thaw is granted bail under conditions which make it possible for him to leave the State he will make for Pennsylvania and we would have to begin our fight all over again with less chance of success. For-

JOIN DEMAND FOR NEW STATE HEALTH BOARD

Several bills to provide for a reorganization of the State Board of Health were heard today before the legislative Committee on Public Health. Harry P. Cassidy, Representative Benjamin F. Haines and ex-Representative John H. Cogswell were the petitioners who demanded reorganization.

Attorney Julius J. Auerbach contended that the State Board of Health is in charge of the most important function of government and should be a paid board in order that its members may devote their entire time and attention to the work.

Representative Haines of Medford declared that the board is generally discredited throughout the State and had proven itself incapable of handling health problems satisfactorily.

THAW LAWYERS GATHER IN BIG WAR COUNCIL

ture of almost any bail is nothing to Thaw."

Asked to hazard a prediction as to the decision of Judge Aldrich, Jerome was reticent but apparently not over optimistic.

"You never can tell what a judge will do," he said. Judge Aldrich has already stated he will send certain questions involving the constitutionality of a New York statute to the Supreme Court for review. This means that a final decision on the habeas corpus writ sought cannot be had here.

The Thaw attorneys will make a bitter attack upon Jerome, according to present plans, at the hearing tomorrow. Their line of argument was well indicated in the last brief they filed.

In that brief they concentrated their arguments upon the propositions: "Thaw is not substantially charged with a crime. He is not technically a fugitive from justice. And his extradition is sought for an ulterior purpose."

They openly charged that Jerome is trying to "get possession of Thaw to lock him up in a madhouse," and that by so doing he is "making a football of the constitution, for the perversion of justice." They said Thaw was "railroaded into Matteawan." And they charged that the New York indictment against Thaw is cumbersome, inflated and made up of "high-sounding words which when analyzed are nothing but words."

MOST VIRILE DOCUMENT.

The brief is the most virile document yet filed in the case. It is this brief which the attorneys will tomorrow use as ground work for their arguments. Some of the sharper passages read:

"If the purpose of this requisition is to return Thaw to Matteawan, it is not in good faith. If it is pressed for private reasons, at the instance of individuals, it is not for public reasons, and therefore, is not in good faith.

"To extradite a person for a simple misdemeanor involving no moral turpitude for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction of his body to lock him up in a madhouse, is making a football of the constitution for the perversion of justice.

"We have heard a great deal about vindicating the law—against the lavish use of the Thaw milions. We unhesitatingly say that if Thaw had been an ordinary laborer without a dollar and had been committed to Matteawan because found not guilty of homicide by reason of insanity, he would long since ceased to have become a charge on the State of New York.

"He would have been deported to his home State long ago. It is the newspaper notoriety due to his financial standing, and the prominence of the Thaw family, and the pique of the prosecuting officers that they did not secure his conviction, that has kept Thaw in Matteawan.

"At the close of his trial for homicide he was acquitted by the jury on the ground that he was insane at the time he committed the act. Without further trial or hearing he was railroaded into Matteawan.

"If the State of New York admits he was sane when he walked out of Matteawan then there is no case against him. If, on the other hand, it admits he is an insane person who must be kept in confinement, there is no law for extraditing him.

"SHOULD BE TRIED."

"If the court has any doubt whether or not Thaw is sane, and it makes any difference in the administration of the law, then a trial by some appropriate method should be had.

"The allegations in the indictment stripped of legal verbiage and boiled down to common English, can possibly mean nothing more than that Thaw aided by others planned and executed his escape from Matteawan. But this is not a legal crime."

Some believe the most significant point in the brief is the paragraph which says: "If the court has any doubt whether or not Thaw is sane, then a trial by some appropriate method should be had." This is taken as a preliminary to a move for a formal test of Thaw's sanity.

LAWYERS ENCOURAGED.

The Thaw attorneys are encouraged to open this fight by the fact that the commission appointed by Judge Aldrich to determine whether it would be safe to release Thaw on bail, took it upon themselves to declare that Thaw is sane—no matter what his condition might have been at the time of his trial for the murder of Stanford White.

Against these contentions of the Thaw forces will be aligned not alone Jerome, but the whole force of New York State. Governor Glynn is taking personal notice of the case and aiding Mr. Jerome in every way. Attorney-General Carmody and his assistant, Franklin Kennedy, are expected in Concord to help Jerome conduct the case.

The New Yorkers will contend that a formal demand for extradition, presented in good form, requires that extradition be granted and carried out. They will deny that the courts have any right to consider the "good faith" of the State of New York in its demand.

Wellesley Girls in 'Quaker Service'

Wellesley College girls held a "Quaker meeting" after the manner of the Society of Friends in the Houghton Memorial Chapel. The service followed an address by Professor Royce of Harvard on "Community Spirit."

It is thought by local attorneys, conversant with the case that Judge Aldrich's decision in the matter of habeas corpus will be a pro forma one. Then without regard as to whether it is favorable to Thaw or not, the matter will be transferred to the highest court, and if it is taken in its sequence, as cases usually are, three years or more will elapse before the matter is finally reached.

There is a possibility that Justice Aldrich may obtain a hearing before the Supreme Court for the attorneys for both sides immediately after the matter has left his jurisdiction. The fact that the judge has taken ample time to become thoroughly acquainted with the briefs of both parties is thought to mean that his decision will be given as soon as the hearing is completed.

TAGUE WOULD REPEAL TROLLEY MERGER LAW

Representative Peter F. Tague of Charlestown, the Democrat leader of the House of Representatives, appeared before the Committee on Railroads today, and advocated the repeal of the western trolley merger act passed a year ago. At that time Mr. Tague was one of several Democrats who voted for the merger.

"I realize, Mr. Chairman," Representative Tague said, "that a great mistake was made a year ago when this legislation was enacted. I regret my part in it. But it is not too late to rectify the mistake. These trolley lines should be built. Our position today, in the light of all that has happened, is that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should come to the relief of her citizens in the western counties and build trolley lines wherever there is a genuine demand for them and a real need. I hope the bill will be repealed."

Representative Haines of Medford, Republican, also urged repeal. They were opposed by former Representative Leonard F. Hardy of Huntington, Republican, who served in the House last year.

MRS. RANTOUL TELLS OF FIGHT WITH HUSBAND

Mrs. Rantoul admitted that she loved Chester C. Rumrill, her husband's friend and clubmate, and that she had told both Rumrill and her husband of this love, maintaining, however, that this regard was simply platonic. Judge Hall at the first trial held that this love of Mrs. Rantoul was platonic.

Rumrill was not called at the first trial, but it has been reported that he would appear at this one.

Mrs. Rantoul collapsed several times in the first trial and finally a truce was declared. A tentative agreement was reached regarding the mutual custody of the children. Henry Hurlburt was appointed as a master, but both Mr. and Mrs. Rantoul declined to accept the terms of the master's finding and, as result, both husband and wife are back in the divorce court now for a final battle.

HEAVILY VEILED.

Mr. Rantoul came to court with the same counsel as at the previous trial, Thomas Hunt of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall.

But Mrs. Rantoul has new counsel, Thomas W. Proctor, of Nason & Proctor.

Mrs. Rantoul arrived in good season for court in an automobile, accompanied by some of her own relatives. She was heavily helled.

The society gallery which marked the previous hearing has hardly had time to date itself up for this hearing, as today was the first session and there has been no advance hearings in the newspapers. But there were several among the spectators who represent smart society. These, with relatives of and witnesses for the principals, lent quite an exclusive touch to the scene.

Judge Hardy is presideing at this trial. He expedites testimony where possible. When Mr. Proctor started to get a description of "Elmwood," the Longfellow mansion in Cambridge, where Mr. and Mrs. Rantoul lived for a while after their marriage, Judge Hardy observed:

"I have ridden by it on horseback often and know it well. You do not have to dwell on that point."

Mr. Rantoul sat beside Mr. Hunt, his counsel. Mrs. Rantoul remained in an ante-room until the case was called. Then she came in and was sworn with her seven other witnesses. Her witnesses were five women and Doctors Putnam and Barnes.

Mrs. Rantoul took the stand as the first witness in her own behalf. She wore a blue dress, with white lace cuffs and collar. Her hat was a small, close-fitting turban of dark purple material, with two flares of purple ribbon on the left side.

APPEARS STRONGER.

Mrs. Rantoul seemed stronger than when she was testifying at the first trial. It was 11:20 when she began her story.

Mrs. Rantoul asked for a chair. She said she had been out of the hospital only three weeks. Then she was questioned by Mr. Proctor in part:

Q.—What is your maiden name? A.—Lois E. Burnett.

Q.—Where were you married? A.—In Cambridge.

Q.—What was your husband's business at the time? A.—He was a trustee in an office or some sort; I do not quite remember.

Q.—Where did you first go to live agter your marriage? A.—On Arch road, Cambridge, and later at "Elmwood" (the old Lowell estate).

Q.—When did you go to live at Elmwood? A.—A year after our marriaeg.

Q.—Where did you spend the Summer? A.—At Beverly Farms.

Q.—How many children have you? A.—Two daughters, Mabel, born in 1905, and Harriett, born in 1906.

Q.—Were you subjected to physical violent treatment by your husband? A.—I was. From July, 1911, to April, 1912.

Q.—Name instances? A.—He called me low and abusive names on August 1, 1911. We were the guests of James M. Codman, Jr., at his Summer place in Wareham. We went down there by motor.

USED MUFF AS PILLOW.

At this juncture Judge Hardy ordered a court officer to provide Mrs. Rantoul with a larger chair with arms on it to make her more comfortable. She made a pillow for her elbows with her muff on the witness shelf in front of her.

Mrs. Rantoul continued:

"I recall that we arrived at Mr. Codman's place very late. It must have been 8 p. m. We had to hurry to dress for dinner. The children brought in our bags and took them upstairs. Mr. Rantoul was given a room and I was given another. Mr. Rantoul retired shortly after dinner, about 9 o'clock. I went to my room about 9:30."

Q.—What had Mr. Rantold's manner been during the dinner? A.—He had been very disagreeable.

Q.—Ha dhe retired in his room when you went to your room at 9:30? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you go into his room as a consequence of what he said to you? A.—Yes. He called me and I went in.

Q.—What did he say to you? A.—He called me a low vile woman and a street walker. He grabbed me by the arms. I broke away from him and went into my room and closed the door. Because of a closet alcove there were really three doors separating his room from mine. A little later he came crashing through the three doors into my room. He frightened me a great deal because he made a good deal of noise. I didn't take off my clothes all that night or the next night. I had no sleep whatever. He abused me again.

FOUGHT FOR RING.

Q.—Did he do anything in relation to your wedding ring? A.—Yes, when he came into my room that morning he tried to wrench my wedding ring off my finger.

Q.—Did he get it? A.—No, I prevented him from getting it by sitting on my hand. He tried hard to get it though. We struggled for some time.

Q.—Was anything done about a bag at that time? A.—Yes. I had a bag on my dresser containing strychnine.

'L' POSTERS TO WARN OF BAD AIR IN ITS CARS

The system of ventilating street cars of the Boston Elevated was scored as a failure at a conference held under the auspices of the Woman's Municipal League at No. 6 Marlboro street.

Among the prominent educators and public men and women present were Dr. J. W. Gallivan of the Board of Health, Professor G. C. Whipple of Harvard, Mrs. Frank L. Young, Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, Miss Mary Vaughn, Mrs. George W. Perkins, Miss Beard, Franklin T. Kurt, Dr. Thomas F. Harrington, physical director of Boston schools, Dr. A. K. Stone, George C. Gardner, Frank Kendall and the Rev. W. R. Lord.

"We are going, I hope, to print posters about the bad street-car ventilation and hire space in the cars to exhibit them," said Mrs. Gardner Hall. "We are going, by every legitimate means, to bring the people who most need it to realize the immense importance of fresh, pure, and pleasant air in the street cars. No better way exists of reaching the public that uses the cars than to advertise in those very street cars the need of proper ventilation."

Dr. Lord of the Twentieth Century Club said:

"The Elevated system is so heavily patronized, and the amount of traffic so great, that the company ought to hesitate at no means of making the travel more safe and comfortable. We must ask for things and there is in the end nothing we ask for that we can't get."

Franklin F. Kurt declared that the Elevated was not in a position to expend the necessary money for radical changes and declared that the public should make the best of the conveniences in ventilation now at hand, supplementing this by a vigorous, public education campaign, after which it might be more effective to ask the company to install improvements.

Rush Aid to Bath Ship, Kineo, Sinking

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 19.—The Bath, Me., schooner Kineo, with eleven persons aboard, including the wife of Captain Farrell and their two-year-old baby, was reported today in a sinking condition 160 miles northeast of Diamond Shoals. The revenue cutter Onondaga, at sea, has been rushed by wireless orders to the assistance of the Kineo.

The vessel was bound from Port Arthur to Providence, R. I., with a cargo of oil. She has had a long voyage, and was forced by high gales to put into Nassau, from which port she last sailed.

THE LUCKY SIXPENCE

LAWSON'S DOG CENTAUR FOUND BEST OF BREED

Thomas W. Lawson's great English bulldog, Centaur, has been judged the best of his breed at the dog show in Mechanics Hall, which ends tomorrow.

Some thought Robert R. Libban's Deodora Monarch, after having won in the class for winners' dogs, would give the Lawson entry a big battle for the coveted special, but such was not the case. Centaur is a candidate for best dog of all breeds in the show.

As is always the case in a Boston show, there was a splendid assembly of Boston terriers, and Trimount Lida, a seven-month-old dog, got the prize for winners' bitches. Kiddo The Demon, purchased yesterday at the show from F. J. Heilbron of Boston by J. Seeley Ward of New York, was pronounced the best in winners' dogs.

The racy little whippets, coming into favor here, furnished some splendid competition. B. F. Lewis' Landsdowne Truro Boy II. won winners.

Sutherland Duchess Answers Lady Decies

NEW YORK, Feb. 19. — Three things distinguish the American woman, acording to the young and beautiful Duchess of Sutherland, who is here, splendid skin, good figure and wonderful tailor-made suits.

The Duchess was shown a statement from Lady Decies, formerly Vivien Gould, in which the young American declared English women were dowdy until they learned to dress from the smart American girls who have married in their country.

"That's rather amusing, isn't it?" said the Duchess. "I have been used all my life to seeing smartly dressed English women.

"I hardly think American women are responsible for the smart dress of our women, although we tremendously admire your women."

RIDER READY TO TELL OWN STORY OF 'ART' WORK

In the trial of Henry Orne Rider, the Auburndale photographer charged with having and distributing improper pictures, which will be resumed tomorrow in the Newton court, Eric Pape, the Boston artist, identified four of the eighteen pictures seized by the police as copies of famous art masters.

The other pictures included those of Newton and Waltham school girls whom Rider is accused of having photographed in the nude.

Rider, it is expected, will take the witness stand in his own defence.

Mrs. Rosalie B. Wallace of No. 125 Appleton street, one of yesterday's witnesses, was asked:

"Did you ever pose for Rider, draped or undraped?" She answered, "Yes."

The question was asked: "How did you pose?" But she was not allowed to answer.

Attorney Joseph G. Murphy, representing Rider, cross-examined Miss Ethel MacDonald of No. 202 Chestnut street, Waltham, Rider's assistant.

The Rev. John Matteson, rector of the Church of the Messiah, Auburndale, a personal friend of Rider's, testified that he had known Rider about twenty years, and that during all this time Rider's reputation had been above reproach.

Miss Ruth O. Heustis, an Auburndale artist, told of having been a worker in the art field for about fourteen years, during all of which time she had known Rider. She testified she had had him do work for her.

"Did he ever show you any pictures of nude females?" was asked.

"He did not," she answered.

The aisles and doorways of the courtroom were crowded with women. Many were unable to get seats. An Auburndale woman, said to be a friend of the defendant, sat in the front row, busying herself with knitting.

New Englands Greatest Cash Store

EXPLANATORY MENTION

In omitting the usual itemized Hour Sale bulletin for the morning and afternoon sessions, which we do for this Friday, we believe a word of explanation should be given. Read, then, if you will, please, of the following attraction we have planned:

SOUVENIRS

Ask Mr. Lockhart for a souvenir of our newly enlarged store, a handsome little ash or pin tray, made in Japan of the popular antimony ware, and representing in relief a fine reproduction of the greatest cash store in New England.

LUNCHEON

For the convenience of the great shopping crowds of Friday, a special luncheon will be served in our restaurant from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. Baked Finnan Haddie, Cream Sauce, Mashed Potatoes, Roll and Butter, Tapioca Cream Pudding, Whip Cream, Tea or Coffee.......... 25c

Ladies' Orchestra

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY!

We have planned and perfected what we believe will be the most unusual and interesting one day's shopping program in which patrons of this store were ever invited to participate.

MR. LOCKHART

Will personally conduct Fifteen-Minute Sales, all day long, throughout the entire store.

Do You Know What This Means?

Were you here last Monday or Tuesday? If not, then your neighbor was, and has undoubtedly told you of the exciting times she had—of the astonishing bargains she secured—that she actually got a pair of blankets for 50c—usually sold for $1.00—that the beautiful waist she now wears cost her $1.00 instead of $1.49. And so it goes—one sensational bargain after another—all totalling a day long to be remembered. Thus it will be tomorrow—Friday. And great will be the attendance.

YOU DO NOT — can not know, what "Mill-End" prices mean in money actually saved, unless you are personally present, and with your own eyes, see Lockhart's original and unique methods in full operation.

Come as early as you can—plan to stay all day

We submit a few examples of goods that will be sold on Friday, but the biggest price reductions are on the smaller pieces and the little lots not advertised. These prices will be made by Mr. Lockhart on the spot, irrespective of original cost.

On the Great Third Floor Friday

Your choice of these garments for 85¢

Rain Capes that are worth $1.49 and $1.98.

Corduroy Dresses, worth from $1.98 to $2.98.

B. & M. TRUSTEE DEADLOCK MAY GO TO WILSON

Chairman Howard Elliott of the New Haven Railroad will place before his directors in New York today the provisional agreement between the Federal Department of Justice and the road for a trusteeship for the Boston & Maine, and explain the two points over which there is a deadlock and possibility of a clash. One is the personnel of the board of trustees, to whom the majority stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad is to be transferred, and the other is the period of the trust.

Apparently there is no prospect of an agreement between Governor Walsh and the New Haven interests on these points and the settlement may be by the Attorney-General or President Wilson.

While it is denied that the Department of Justice has declared an ultimatum that the New Haven must accept the unbending terms laid down by the department or go to law, the intimations are that that is the attitude of the department and that the New Haven recognizes it is at the mercy of the department. The Attorney-General has seen the President and it is intimated it was on this matter.

WALSH OUTLINES PACT.

The essence of the agreement, declares Governor Walsh, who is expected to return to Boston today, is absolute divorce, not only of the New Haven from the Boston & Maine, but also of the New Haven management from the Boston & Maine except in the power to receive the assets resulting from the sale of the New Haven's Boston & Maine stock, and that the Boston & Maine would be managed not in the least by the New Haven people or its management, but by the board of trustees, whoever they may be, and by the minority stockholders, whose rights were also most carefully safeguarded in the preliminary draft.

Inability to agree on the rights of financial interests and the general public is given as the reason for the momentary halt in the negotiations at Washington.

"It has taken twenty years to build up this system," said Chairman Elliott, and it cannot be re-arranged in a day. However, I am confident that the dissolution agreement will be reached without suit and will be accomplished within a short time."

"While there is no desire by the State of Massachusetts or the Department of Justice," said Governor Walsh, "to injure the railroad interests' standing, we are determined that the people of New England shall be guarded before guarantees are made on the sale of the stock in order to hold up prices."

At one time during the Washington conference the New Haven representatives intimated they might "carry on the fight" before they would permit a sale of the Boston & Maine stock at prices which would "deplete the assets."

SOME NAMES SUGGESTED.

Governor Walsh said there would be five trustees and one of them would be from New Hampshire. Allen Hollis, a brother of the Senator, has been suggested. Edward C. Niles, chairman of the New Hampshire Public Service Commission, is a possibility.

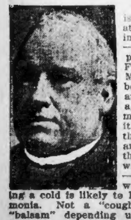
Marcus P. Knowlton of Springfield, former chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, is to be chairman. Chairman Elliott has accepted him. It is suggested that Philip Dexter, Francis C. Welch and Charles E. Cotting have been submitted by Governor Walsh. Henry L. Higginson is understood to have refused. Chairman Elliott is said to have advocated the appointment of a man like Samuel Carr. The name of William B. Lawrence of Medford, the largest minority shareholder of the Boston & Maine, was submitted to Governor Walsh, but he is satisfied the rights of the minority shareholders will be fully protected in the trust agreement.

Rules Shooting Is Really Desertion

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 19.—The minute Hugh N. Strang fired a bullet into the body of his wife on April 20, 1911, on the street in Paterson, technical desertion forced by the act began, and therefore Mrs. Christine Strang is entitled to a divorce under the laws of New Jersey. So ruled Vice-Chancellor Howell here in deciding the suit for divorce brought by the wife.

'Ritual Murder Victim' Is Alive

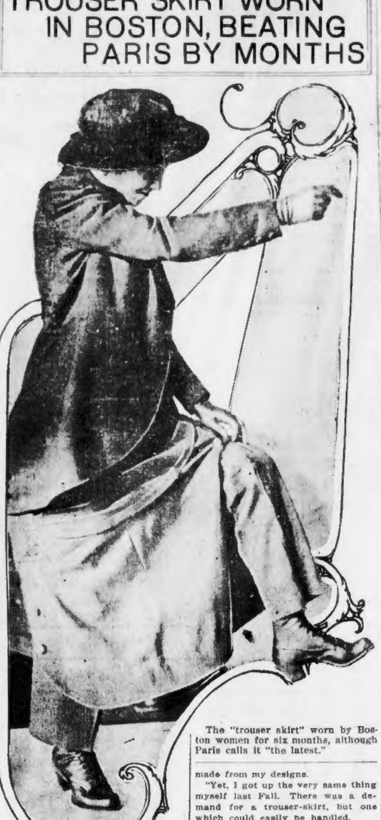
ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 19.—Telegrams from Kiev announce that Pashkoff, the Jewish tailor of Fastoff, who was arrested and charged with the "ritual murder" of a boy, has been released on bail in consequence of the discovery alive of the Christian boy, Taranthevitch, who was at first said to have been the victim of the crime.



WHY COLDS LEAD TO PNEUMONIA

When a cold is neglected it attacks the lining of the lungs—then it's pneumonia. Father John's Medicine is best for colds and protects against pneumonia because it nourishes the system and drives out the poisonous waste matter—any other way of treating a cold is likely to lead to pneumonia. Not a "cough syrup" or "balsam" depending upon dangerous and weakening drugs, but a food medicine and body builder.

TROUSER SKIRT WORN IN BOSTON, BEATING PARIS BY MONTHS



The "trouser skirt" worn by Boston women for six months, although Paris calls it "the latest."

Potash and Perlmutter "stuff" right in our midst.

Remember how one of the partners went to Paris to get the most exclusive styles and proudly brought back a gown designed right in his shop in New York, by his own partner?

New York put one over on Paris that time.

Same way for Providence, R. I., according to the tale related today by William B. Slater of that city.

Mr. Slater is a high-class designer of ladies' suits, coats, etc.

He beheld in the public prints of last Monday an interesting story on advance Paris fashions, with pictures. The story was cabled right over from Paris and the feature—as illustrated in the picture—was the "trouser trotter" or revised edition of the harem skirt.

The picture showed a girl wearing what looked like a split skirt, with trousers underneath—a very picturesque costume.

The text explained that this was an ordinary skirt, slit up to the knees on each side, with short trouser legs, reaching up only to the knee and with the ends creased and cuffed, a la masculine garments.

Mr. Slater read the story carefully, studied the picture and then remarked: "I should worry."

Then, having occasion to come up to Boston, he dropped into the AMERICAN office and explained this way:

"We don't need to import any 'trouser-trotter' from Paris when the women in Boston and Providence have been wearing 'em for the past six months.

"Where'd they get 'em? Had them made from my designs.

"Yet, I got up the very same thing myself last Fall. There was a demand for a trouser-skirt, but one which could easily be handled.

"Finally I designed a garment myself for the ladies. It was like a skirt, a little short and slit on each side, with four buttons to fasten the flaps if desired.

"Underneath the skirt are the trouser-legs, which simply reach up to the knee and fasten around the leg with elastics to keep them snug.

"The trouser-legs are finished off like regular trousers, with crease and cuff and present a complete trouser effect.

Actress Tells Secret

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth with a Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair." —Adv.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mary: I have found that face powder clogs the pores and causes that rough, scaly condition of your skin. Make up and use this inexpensive lotion and you will be delighted with the results: Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax (which you get at the druggist's) in ½ pint hot water or witch hazel. After cleansing and drying the skin, apply the spurmax lotion, rubbing lightly, until it vanishes. This lotion imparts a clearness and velvety softness to the skin and restores the rose-tint of healthy maidenhood. The spurmax lotion is especially nice for sallow, "muddy," oily skins and is superior to powder, as it is invisible when on and will not rub off in patches.

Annie L.: Powdered delatone is the most effective thing of which I know for removing stubborn hairy growths. Get an original package and mix enough powder with water to cover the hairs not wanted. Apply and in 2 or 3 minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a quick, harmless method and seldom needs repeating. Be sure it is delatone you get.

Belle S.: Your pain in the small of the back, constant headaches and loss of weight is the result of poison-laden blood. Here is my formula for an old-fashioned system-tonic which, if taken regularly for awhile, will restore you to perfect health: To ½ pint alcohol (never use whisky) add 1 ounce hardene (get from your druggist), then ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful three times a day. This is gentle in action, cleanses the blood of all impurities and is unsurpassed for clearing the skin of discolorations and restoring the healthy glow of youth to the complexion.

Mrs. B.: Quite right! Your brittle, falling hair is evidently caused by washing with an alkali preparation. Here is my way of cleansing scalp and hair so both are kept in perfect health: Dissolve a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water and pour a little at a time on the head while rubbing briskly. This works up into a thick, creamy lather that stops irritation and dissolves every particle of dandruff and excess oil. After rinsing the hair dries rapidly with a soft fluff and beautiful gloss. Canthrox shampoos stimulate a healthy condition in the scalp and induce the hair to grow thick and long.

Mrs. Al.: Your excess fat will soon vanish after a short course of the parnotis treatment, made by getting 4 ounces parnotis from your druggist and dissolving in 1½ pints hot water. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. This gradually dissolves the fat and when your weight is sufficiently reduced your skin will be firm and free from wrinkles. No diet or exercise is necessary, as it cannot possibly do any injury.

Mrs. S. T.: To make your eyes sparkle I would suggest using simply crystos tonic which is inexpensive and easily prepared. Just dissolve 1 ounce crystos in a pint cold water and it is ready. Putting a few drops in each eye frequently soon relieves the smart and ache and will give to them a sparkle and expressiveness truly charming. This is excellent for weak eyes.

X. O.: Your dull, streaky hair indicates an impoverished condition of the scalp and hair-roots. I am giving you a simple recipe, which if you make up and use, will banish your scalp-troubles and make your hair grow thick, silky and fluffy. Get from your druggist 1 ounce quinzoin, pour into ½ pint alcohol, then add ½ pint water. Massage the scalp once or twice a week. This stops the irritation and overcomes dandruff and puts your scalp and hair-roots in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Dora M.: For banishing your wrinkles you will find a plain almozoin jelly-cream quick and certain in its action and also splendid for clearing the skin. It is made as follows: Stir 1 ounce almozoin into ½ pint water, add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine and let stand over night. Apply a thick coating of the jelly-cream on retiring and massage well into the skin. Allow to remain on until morning, then wash off and rub some more on. This is unfailing and dispels freckles, blotches, pimples and other beauty defects. It is also excellent for chaps or tender skin.

GREAT BRITAIN THREATENS TO CANCEL TREATY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Great Britain has threatened to abrogate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, the joint treaty with Russia relating to Alaska and the joint treaty with Canada if the United States does not repeal the law granting exemptions of Panama Canal tolls to coastwise vessels of the United States. This information was obtained by the AMERICAN today following the White House conference between President Wilson and Oscar Underwood, leader of the House of Representatives.

As he left the White House the only comment Mr. Underwood would make was:

"The President and I conferred on the subject of Panama Canal tolls. We came to no agreement or conclusion."

HENRY IS SUMMONED.

Chairman Henry of the House Rules Committee has been summoned for a conference with the President today.

That Congress will not stand for the policy of repeal upon which the President has entered and the gigantic bluff of Great Britain is emphasized by the attitude of both the House and the Senate in its previous action on the original law and the standing of the House and Senate Committees as they are orgaized today.

On the floor of the Senate yesterday Senators Bristow and Chamberlain characterized the President's policy as un-American and a violation of the party platform which no honest man could support.

The House Committee having the repeal proposition under consideration stands ten for exemption, nine against exemption, two non-committal, and one member so ill that he will not be able to attend its session. The two non-committal members have leanings in the direction of the American policy.

The Senate Committee has lost two of its members to the President, but its vote will be unquestionably against the repeal. The specific proposition to levy tolls against domestic commerce in the canal was defeated in the Senate, August 9, 1913, by a vote of 43 to 41.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, visited Secretary Bryan and is understood today to have conveyed formally to the State Department the opinion that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is paramount to the canal act. The British government also insists that as the canal act violates the treaty the toll exemption must be repealed.

The three treaties involved in Great Britain's threat are:

PRETEXT FOR FIGHT.

Hay-Pauncefote treaty of 1901, the abrogation of which Great Britain holds will revive articles of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850, giving England certain rights not now permitted in this hemisphere and guaranteeing on the part of the United States the use of any canal that might be built on equal terms to all nations.

Alaska boundary treaty of 1903, to which Russia is also a party, and which involves the boundary between British North America and Alaska. Abrogating this treaty would give England a pretext for opening a fight for a seaport along the narrow southern Alaskan strip.

Webster-Ashburton treaty of 1842, by which free commerce of the St. Lawrence and the Detroit rivers is guaranteed and provided for.

The threat also is understood to extend to the fisheries problem between the United States and Canada, which only was settled recently through a temporary arrangement that is to be put into permanent effect through a supplemental treaty.

FEATHERS FALL OUT

DURHAM, N. H., Feb. 19.—Good-by scalding water, old newspapers and a kitchen apron when chicken-picking time comes around.

Housewives from coast to coast will rise up and call Professor R. V. Mitchell blessed when they read that he has discovered a painless-picking patent that denudes the fowl of feathers without force.

It is a simple matter—just stick a knife into the chicken's mouth and up into a certain point in its brain. The feathers all loosen. Shake your bird and singe, draw and it is ready to broil, roast or fry, as the age of the bird may decree.

THREATS CAUSE ILLNESS OF MISS LONGFELLOW

Threatening calls over the telephone have now been added to the troubles of the family of Henry W. Longfellow, 2d, of Allston, who was threatened with death in three letters demanding $10,000, and today Mrs. Longfellow is under the care of a doctor.

Mrs. Longfellow, who has been in poor health, is overcome with worry, following the threats her two children would be kidnaped. The receipt of a telephone message, apparently from the authors of the three letters, has completely unnerved her.

It developed today that Mrs. Longfellow was called to the telephone in her home at No. 3 Commonwealth terrace to hear a harsh voice demanding to speak with her husband. He was not at home. This seemed to excite the man at the other end of the wire, according to Mrs. Longfellow, and the conversation ended with the man's declaration: "I'll get you yet."

Now, when the telephone bell rings, Mrs. Longfellow dreads to answer the call. "I always tremble and fear another such telephone message," she told a reporter.

"My wife has been greatly affected by these letters and phone calls, and it was because of her condition that I reported the matter to the police," Mr. Longfellow said today.

G. Battist Chiavacci, Mr. Longfellow's foreman, is still guarding the home from the house at No. 5 Commonwealth terrace, where he can watch any person passing by or going into the Longfellow home. He said today the three letters were apparently the work of an educated person.

Chiavacci has removed the decoy he placed beneath a stone in a vacant lot on Allston street, where the letters demanded $10,000 be placed. The decoy box was filled with iron washers, and the spot has been watched since Saturday night, the hour at which the money was to be left.

Says Salvarsan Has Been Given a Million

BERLIN, Feb. 22. — The attack made upon salvarsan by the head of the police medical department of Berlin, has evoked an angry reply from Professor Ehrlich, who says: "Up to date more than 1,000,000 persons have been treated with salvarsan. Even if it were true that 275 deaths have resulted that would be a small percentage. If I did not believe the benefits derivable from the remedy far outweighed the disadvantages I would withdraw it from use."

BUTLER STATUE BACKERS HAPPY OVER VICTORY

Supporters of the bill for erecting a statue to the late General Benjamin F. Butler were elated today over their success in securing favorable action from the House by a vote of 117 to 104.

The vote resulted in overturning the adverse report of the committee which had this matter in charge and in having the bill for the statue substituted.

Early in the voting it looked as if it would be a straight party lineup, the Democrats for and Republicans against the bill. The Republicans from Lowell and most of the Republicans and Progressives in Essex County voted for the bill, however.

Representative Martin M. Lomasney led the fight for those who favored the statue, while Representative Washburn of Worcester carried the brunt of the battle for those opposed in yesterday's scrimmage.

Moorfield Storey, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, was attacked by Lomasney for not having gone to war in 1863.

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Keeps your liver and bowels active and you feel bully for months.

Get a 10-cent box.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your "insides" pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Rub Rheumatic, Aching Joints

Rub Pain Away With a Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil"

Rheumatism is "pain only."

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and can not burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness and stiffness. Don't suffer! Relief and a cure await you. "St. Jacobs Oil" is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.

FRIDAY A Receivers' Order Goes Into Effect that Will Save New England Folks a Lot of Money

ALL odd lots and broken lots go into the sale at new low prices tomorrow. The receivers have ordered it marked at prices that will positively insure an immediate and complete clearance. Many of the best values are not advertised because lots are too small. Hundreds of bargain surprises await the thousands that will come.

THE selling during this great Receivers' Sale has been tremendous, as everyone knows, and of course this causes hundreds of broken lines and odd lots—and these lots are almost invariably the remaining lots of best selling lines. Therefore Friday's sale offers the most wanted merchandise at prices unmatchably low.

Every Counter in This Great Store Will Be Turned into a Bargain Counter Friday.

SOLONS WRESTLING WITH 108 PROBLEMS ON THE HILL TODAY

This promised to be a big and an important day before legislative committees at the State House, with 108 different matters on an unusually interesting list. Among them:

Reorganization of the State Board of Education.

Ditto, the State Board of Health.

Sale of liquor in clubs.

Conveyances of children to courts, etc.

Repeal of the Western Trolley Merger Act.

Registration of nurses.

Sale of cold storage eggs.

Appointment of insurance brokers and agents.

Rural credits and credit unions.

Encouraging the breeding of poultry.

* * *

It appears to be plain enough that things are in an extremely bad way with the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia.

* * *

With the Governor (the Commander-in-Chief) seeking to dump his Adjutant-General because they are not in sympathy—"out of step," it was called before the Committee on Military Affairs—and with the Governor supported unanimously by the twelve commanding officers of the militia, while lesser officers take their stand with the "A. G.," organization and discipline would appear to be on their way to the bow-wows.

* * *

Under ordinary conditions a Legislature would be likely to grant the Governor's request that he be permitted to choose his own Adjutant-General as Governors of Massachusetts have done before him.

* * *

Support of the Governor's recommendation by ALL the commanding officers of the militia, moreover, would ordinarily strengthen this favorable attitude, but it must be remembered that a powerful lobby shoved the five-year tenure bill through the Legislature of 1912 and that the same powerful lobby may be expected to get to work this year. If, that is to say, the lobby is not already on the job.

* * *

The hearing will be continued next Tuesday, at which time it will be well for somebody in the confidence of David I. Walsh to answer the suggestion of former Senator Dennis E. Halley, of Lawrence, that the twelve commanding officers "put one over" on the Governor and induced him to recommend a repeal of the five-year tenure bill.

* * *

"I feel that the Governor has been deceived," said Senator Halley. "I am sure that if he gives the Adjutant-General a fair chance, a reasonable trial, and then feels that Gardner W. Pearson is not the man he would like in this place, General Pearson will resign."

* * *

Major (and Representative) John H. Sherburne of Brookline, Republican, Harvard man and attorney, conducted the case for the commanding officers without once mentioning the Adjutant-General by name and without even a suggestion of personalities.

* * *

Some important things were said in the course of the House discussion of a statue to General Benjamin F. Butler.

* * *

Kennard of Somerville, against the statue, said that Butler shouldn't have a statue because Butler as a legislator was against the erection of statues and once voted against a statue to Daniel Webster.

* * *

While "Smiling Bob" Washburn of Worcester attacked Butler as an inconsistent friend of labor who did not always wear overalls and who occasionally ate in dining cars.

* * *

Sooner or later this Commonwealth will build a Butler statue just so the General Court can have something else to fight about. This is getting as tiresome as the fellow in the next camp with a second-hand graphophone and only one record, "Sweet Violets."

* * *

The House rejected the anti-Butler report of the Committee on State House and Library by a vote of 104 to 117.

* * *

If everybody could see real estate and housing conditions in the Charlestown district as Representative Peter F. Tague sees them, the elevated railway structure would make way for a subway as speedily as possible.

* * *

"The elevated structure," Representative Tague tells the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs," has affected every home in Charlestown. No man can buy a house in Charlestown on easy terms, because nobody will advance the money. Houses are tumbling down because owners cannot see their way to make repairs. Almost any piece of property on Main street can today be bought for half its assessed valuation. Because of the depreciation in realty values, brought about by this hideous structure, banks will decline to advance within a third of the valuation.

"There we are, Mr. Chairman, within walking distance from the heart of the city. Long before this our section should have blossomed with modern apartment houses. Instead of that you see a community ruined, in order that outlying cities and towns may have rapid transit. If there were no better way out, Charlestown could stand it. There is another and a better way. Give us a subway!"

* * *

Rigor mortis appears to have set in on the Sunday baseball proposition.

* * *

It was all off with Sunday baseball, for the present year at least, when the Clerk of the Committee on Legal Affairs made a tabulation of the organizations now on record against it:

Federation of Massachusetts churches, 2,000 in number.

Federation of Catholic Societies, 300,000 members.

Evangelical Alliance of Boston and Vicinity.

Christian Endeavor Society.

W. C. T. U. of Massachusetts.

Churches of New Bedford and vicinity.

Churches of Springfield and vicinity.

Others too numerous to mention.

The same organizations favor the broad proposition of "one day's rest in seven." They oppose any movement to "open Sunday more fully to trade, business, or sports."

The Chaperon's CHATTER

By THE DOWAGER.

Today is an especially busy one with both the older and younger members of society, for there are affairs innumerable planned for both the day and evening.

Quite the most important event of all is the dinner-dance which Mrs. Horatio N. Slater is giving at her new Beacon street home in honor of her pretty debutante daughter, Miss Ray Slater. The beautiful ballroom of the Slater home has just been completed and affords a wonderfully fine and spacious floor for the young members of the elect to trip the light fantastic. The ballroom is hung for the occasion of the ball with many of the beautiful and priceless tapestries which Mrs. Slater purchased abroad. There are to be two hundred of the younger members of society at the dance and many more of the older members. Several dinners will be given by prominent hostesses who will later take their young guests on to the dance.

This dance is the christening of the new Slater ballroom, which will later be the scene of many large and brilliant affairs.

* * *

Mrs. J. Dudley Clark, one of the best-known hostesses of the smart set, will entertain at dinner tonight several of the younger members of society whom she will later chaperone at the Slater ball. Mrs. Clark's hospitality is in honor of that very attractive bud, Miss Nathalie Thayer.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Howard of Boston, who is among the prominent matrons spending the Winter in Baltimore, has issued cards for a tea to be given at the clubhouse of the Maryland Society of the Colonial Dames of America, Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Howard was formerly Miss Jane Wilson of Baltimore and the late Mr. Charles Howard was a Bostonian.

* * *

Mrs. Edmund H. Rice, widow of Colonel Edmund Rice, U. S. A., who is so well known in Newport, Boston and the North Shore, has been spending several days at the Brunswick prior to going on to Washington, where she is to spend some time with relatives.

Tea will be served this afternoon from 3:30 until 5 at the loan exhibition of miniatures and silhouettes in the rooms of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, No. 9 Ashburton place. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge of Berkeley street is the hostess.

FONTANA SINGS FAREWELL AT OPERA HOUSE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Love of the Three Kings" was given its last performance of the season at the Opera last night. It was also the farewell of Ferrari-Fontana, who sails for Italy tomorrow. It introduced Luisa Villani, the lyric soprano from the Canadian Opera company, in the role of Fiora, a part that she created in Italy, we are told. Marcoux appeared as the blind king, Archibaldo, and Ancona again sang Manfredo. Moranzoni conducted.

The performance was spirited and consistent, despite the fact that the cast contained two new principals. The large audience approved the Montemezzi music drama heartily.

Villani was heard here upon one occasion, I believe, about two years ago. Her voice is in better condition now than then. She sings with more art. She is a much more effective singer and actor. Although Montemezzi gives the soprano no big aria there is ample chance to display a voice in his melodiously flowing recitative.

Marcoux brings his abounding vitality to the part of the old blind king, and makes of it another great role. He is wonderfully intense and in the great scene of the second act is frightfully realistic. He sings fully and freely, and finds the music agreeable to his peculiar vocal qualities.

Ancona sang and acted effectively in the big baritone role. Fontana was given an ovation. Almost unknown before this season, he has compelled Boston and New York as well to rank him with the world's greatest tenors, in the short space of three months.

WHY ACTRESSES MARRY SO OFTEN.

Clara Morris regrets the passing of the grand old times when stage folk were contented with just one wife and one husband, and she finds a reason for their frequent marriages and divorces in vanity, luxury and too much petting.

SEE SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

Dunn Finds Bread Light in Malden

Malden bread dealers have made a profit of $250 a day more than they are justly entitled to, according to the sealer of weights and measures, William E. Dunn, who declares that the 20,000 loaves of bread sold in that city daily averaged a quarter of a pound short weight. As a result, he has ordered that in the future every loaf must weigh two pounds.

MAN ROBBED IN NORTH STATION PASSENGER CAR

Frederick D. North, fifty-six, of Broadhook, Ct., was beaten into insensibility and robbed of a gold watch and chain in a passenger car at the North Station early today. He was found helpless an hour later and taken to the Relief Hospital suffering from multiple injuries.

North gave the police a description of his assailant and Patrolmen Donovan and Lewis arrested a man in Causeway street who said he was Benjamin Malley, twenty-eight, of No. 62 Nashua street. The prisoner was taken to the hospital where North identified him as the man who had robbed him.

North told the police he was on his way to the South Station to board a train for his home. He lost his way and was directed to the North Station in front of which he met Malley. Malley invited him into the station to wait and they sat down in a car of a train that was being made up for the morning runs. The victim said they had only been in the car a short time when he was attacked by Malley. He struggled until a blow over the head rendered him unconscious and he collapsed on the floor of the car. An hour later he came to and attracted the attention of men working in the station by his cries.

Donovan and Lewis later searched Malley's room and are said to have recovered the watch and chain, $7 in money and a mileage book. Malley is said to have served six years in prison.

Affinity's Divorce Suit Names Wife

DENVER, Feb. 19.—A new form of divorce suit was filed here today when a legal wife was named in a suit for divorce filed by an affinity. The plaintiff alleges she entered into a common law marriage with John D. Peery in 1907 and that a son was born. She asks the court to declare void this marriage and to secure custody of the boy.

Elisha W. Cobb Heads Boot and Shoe Club

Elisha W. Cobb of Boston was elected president of the Boston Boot and Shoe Club at the annual meeting held in a Back Bay hotel. The other officers selected are: John E. Maguire of Haverhill, first vice president; Fred B. Rice of Boston, second vice president; Thomas F. Anderson of Boston, secretary; Zenas Sears Jr., of Boston, assistant secretary; Frederick M. Haynes of Boston, treasurer.

Mrs. Bronson to Wed Adrian Iselin

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Adrian Iselin, a millionaire retired banker and yachtsman, brother of C. Oliver Iselin, appeared at City Hall, accompanied by Mrs. Sarah Gracie Bronson of Harlem, and took out a marriage license. The wedding date is unknown.

Evening Dress May Be Changed to Blue

LONDON, Feb. 19.—An important change, which may mean the introduction of colored instead of black evening clothes, is suggested by the fact that several diners at the Master Tailors' Association meeting wore dark blue evening dress, which gave the wearers a smart appearance.

HORSE LOSES IN DASH WITH LOCOMOTIVE

The straightest piece of railroad in the United States stretches due north and south on the Milford branch of the Boston & Albany, between East Holliston and South Framington.

As the 8:06 express for Boston was pulling out of East Holliston today a horse attached to a red sleigh owned by one of the farmers broke away and dashed up the middle of the track toward South Framingham. The owner of the rig started after the runaway and the train followed slowly along.

Passengers crowded the platforms and cheered the three-cornered race and even the card players in the smoking car forsook the pasteboards and rubbered at the unusual contest.

The farmer soon became winded and climbed aboard the locomotive which crept along just behind the horse and sleigh. There are no cross roads between East Holliston and Whitneys two miles down the track. At Whitneys some of the commuters formed a company front across the track. The horse, which was pretty well jaded from two miles of plowing through the heavy snow, slowed up and was caught.

The passengers resumed their seats, the card players resumed their cards and the engineer opened the throttle. It was good fun while it lasted.

Plan Injunction Ban in Labor Wars

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. — Announcement that the use of injunctions in labor disputes probably would be forbidden and trade unions exempted from the operations of the Sherman anti-trust law during the present session of Congress, and if not a big fight would be made on the House floor to bring about these changes, was made today in a statement issued by Representative Buchanan of Illinois.

Road Pays $835,512 for Recording Fee

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A check for $835,512 from the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, in the form of a recording fee for a mortgage, received yesterday, established a new record in the Hall of Records. The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad paid the sum stated as a recording tax.

Bees for Flats

◆

Sparrows Are Wise

Out of 300 women applicants for positions as police women in Chicago only thirteen passed the mental test included in the civil service examination.

Frank C. Pellett, State bee inspector of Iowa, addressing a beekeepers' conference at St. Louis, said that every one who lives in a flat should keep a hive of bees.

Earl Mosley, aged fourteen, of Chicago, received a pet lamb for a birthday present. It followed him to school. The children laughed and called him "Little Bo-peep." The teacher scolded and sent him home. A few hours later the boy's body was found hanging from a rafter in his father's barn.

Matt Booth, a Nickel Plate yard engineer at Conneaut, O., asserts that he has repeatedly seen English sparrows place grains of corn that had fallen from cars on the rail before his engine in order that they might be crushed and the more easily eaten.

Property exceeding $10,000 in value is bequeathed the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, by Miss Sarah D. Magill, an aged Springfield recluse, whose parsimony resulted in her freezing to death last week.

Mrs. Agnes Viola Goetchins, President of the Township Improvement Association of Rutherford, N. J., has been appointed a marshal of that town. She is to serve without pay, but will wear a badge and have full police authority.

A bath given to a statue of Circe in the home of Miss Florence Mathews of Norwalk, Ct., by Mrs. Ellen McIlhony, a domestic, cost the former $950 in damages to the latter when the statue fell over and injured the servant.

Foss Recovers From Sore Throat

Former Governor Foss, who has been suffering from a sore throat which confined him to his home for several days, is better, and he left last night for his second visit to New York since his first election to the governorship.

GORE JURYMEN DECIDED CASE WAS BLACKMAIL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 19.—Telegrams of congratulation poured in today on Thomas P. Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma, on his victory in the $50,000 damage suit of Mrs. Minnie Bond. The jury exonerated him last night. The only expression from Senator Gore on the verdict thus far has been: "The verdict confirms my faith; truth will triumph."

Mrs. Gore said: "I am too happy for words. I am thinking now only of my babies and I want to get home to them. F. J. Giddings, attorney for Mrs. Bond, announced today that he will appeal to the Supreme Court and demand another trial. Henry Carpenter, foreman and the oldest man on the jury, said:

"We were ready four days ago to return a verdict. At times I looked at Mrs. Bond and wanted to take her by the throat and shake her. It just seemed to me and to the other men on the jury, too, that it was the most cruel and shameful attack on a good man we had ever known. It was a mighty flimsy case. We made up our minds as soon as the plaintiff's testimony was in that it was just blackmail."

Princeton Second Choice of Yale Men

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 19.—Two hundred Yale seniors prefer Princeton next to Yale, according to the class statistics out today. Only forty-seven are for Harvard. The largest number favor the theatre as the favorite amusement.

50,000 DEAD IN JAPAN FROM RICE FAMINE

TOKIO, Feb. 19.—That more than 50,000 men, women and children have perished in the northern section of the empire, where millions are starving as a result of the failure of the rice crop, was the information received from government investigators today.

The methods of relief afforded by the government have suffered to relieve the distress in a great measure, but an epidemic of disease has broken out and the nurses and physicians sent to the stricken section have been unable to cope with the situation. Volunteer doctors and nurses are now being enlisted to go to the scene.

Sakura-Jima volcano, which recently killed several hundred persons by its eruption, is still throwing out lava and many earthquake shocks are felt daily in its vicinity.

Exonerate Two of Alaskan Fraud

SEATTLE, Feb. 19.—A verdict of not guilty has been returned in the case of Charles F. Munday and A. W. Shields, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States of the Stracey group of Alaska coal lands through use of dummy entrymen. Persons indicted at Detroit, Spokane and Tacoma are still to be tried.

ACCUSE TWO IN DEATH CASE AT WATERTOWN

After a four-hour grilling, two men were placed under arrest today in Watertown charged with the murder of Ismail Ismerly-Oghlo, whose battered body was found in a field near his home at No. 3 Crawford street, a few days ago.

The men arrested today are Eghia Aselbagen, of No. 81 Arlington street, East Watertown, and Hapt Kahayian of No. 3 Crawford street. Two others have already been arrested as accessories. The police believe the murder resulted from a quarrel over a card game.

CHAPTER I.

AT the Summer Hotel on the lake shore Edwin Drake was undoubtedly the "catch of the season." Mariageable daughters felt it in their hearts. Their fathers admitted it, and their mothers sat on the hotel veranda early and late watching each other's devices for capturing so desirable a son-in-law.

Needless to say, Edwin Drake was rich, as well as handsome and manly.

But Destiny—too powerful an opponent even for the match-making mammas—was on the side of Ruth Borden, who, so far as any of the hotel guests knew, hadn't a mamma to her name. As a matter of fact, she was as charming and heartless an adventuress as ever seized the opportunity of a rowboat on a moonlit lake to win a promise of marriage from an inexperienced youth.

It was not three days later when, through the familiar mistake of transposing letters in envelopes already addressed, the adventuress unwittingly enlightened her victim. The letter which Edwin Drake received, and which Ruth Borden intended for a notorious gambler named Harry Weston, was as follows:

Dear Harry:

"We win. Edwin Drake has proposed marriage and announced our engagement. It now means marriage—or trouble for him. RUTH."

That same evening Edwin quietly left the hotel and returned to the city.

During the next three days Ruth managed to hide her chagrin behind an enigmatic smile when pointedly and maliciously questioned about the disappearance of her betrothed husband. Then she received a letter from him. It was written on the back of the note she had meant for her gambler "pal." Drake wrote:

"Since you want money only, I will gladly buy back my freedom at any cost. Will you set a price for cash? "DRAKE."

CHAPTER II.

Dr. Wilson, mingling business with pleasure, was a valued member of a Summer colony up in the hills, far from the great city's noise and heat. One day he was much pleased to see among the letters on his desk an envelope addressed in the familiar handwriting of his long absent friend, Edwin Drake. He opened it and read:

"My Dear Friend Wilson: I have returned from my vacation to my little farm, sick at heart and nearly ruined by a clever adventuress. Come to see me. I need you more than ever. DRAKE."

Having made his day's round of calls, Dr. Wilson turned his horse's head in the direction of Edwin Drake's modest but comfortable farm house.

* * *

Once more Destiny was taking a hand in Edwin's affairs.

While Edwin was pruning one of his favorite shade trees close beside the highway a severed branch fell just in time to frighten the spirited horse which Beth Andrews, celebrated beauty and heiress of the Summer colony, was riding past at a gallop. She was thrown, and lay unconscious in the road.

Edwin picked up the inert form and carried it into his house. While Edwin's little sister, and housekeeper, was applying restoratives, Dr. Wilson arrived. The family of the heiress were among his patients.

"She's only badly shaken up," he said, when Beth had come to her senses. "In an hour she will be able to go home. I'm sorry I can't——"

"It was all my fault," said Edwin. "I'll saddle a couple of horses and see that Miss Andrews gets home all right."

"Thank you, Mr. Drake," said Beth, who had liked the manly young fellow the moment her eyes had opened with returning consciousness. "You needn't wait, Doctor."

As they rode side by side in the dusk up the broad driveway leading to the millionaire's pretentious country home, Edwin knew of a certainty, and Beth realized vaguely, that they must see each other again very soon, and often, or suffer great unhappiness.

Beth introduced Edwin to her father. The millionaire thanked Edwin on his daughter's behalf with pointed formality. Later he said to his daughter:

"This Drake had prospects. But he lost all his money, and now is one of the most poverty-stricken farmers in the neighborhood."

Which affected Beth's sentiments in not the slightest degree.

There were delightful bridle paths among the hills and tempting shady paths along the woodland stream. Edwin and Beth managed to meet nearly every day.

CHAPTER III.

The time came when Edwin could no longer remain silent.

"You are in my thoughts continually," he said. "I love you; but my wife must live on what I earn."

Beth knew whither her heart called her. She answered.

"I love you enough to work with you."

Braving the displeasure of her father, they were quietly married, and Beth cheerfully assumed the duties of a farmer's wife.

The little sister was sent away to school. All the laborious routine of the farmhouse fell upon tender hands that had never known labor of any kind.

For years and months Beth toiled uncomplainingly, happy to share any kind of life with her adored husband. She was quite separated from her family.

One day a merry coaching party of her former fashionable companions drove up to the Drake farmhouse. Beth, in a gingham apron, was pulling the feathers from a chicken which had been killed for the midday meal. The coach stopped but for a moment. Beth's former society companions regarded her with such unconcealed pity that for the first time, she began to pity herself.

Edwin noticed the change. He redoubled his efforts to lighten her tasks, to keep her amused. All in vain. She brooded constantly over the loss of her accustomed luxuries and pleasures. The sight of her roughened hands annoyed her.

She became ill and flighty.

One day she appeared at her father's door and fell, weeping, into her mother's arms. She was received with joy; all was forgiven.

She knew that Edwin was awaiting her return with steadily waning hopes; but she felt too ill and wretched even to write to him.

Dr. Wilson called to see her frequently. One day he told her something that filled her with wonder—and then with joy. Now she knew that she still loved Edwin, and could not long remain away from him—for there was to be a new tie between them.

She announced her determination to return to the farmhouse. Her father warned her:

"You can never return to this home if you leave it now."

But Beth's heart called her to Edwin.

CHAPTER IV.

When Harry Weston had gambled away the last of the money which Ruth Borden had extorted from Edwin Drake, he induced Ruth to visit the farmhouse in the hills and try to extort some more.

Ruth entered the open door so silently that Edwin, sitting disconsolately by the window, knew of no other presence in the room until he felt two soft hands placed over his eyes and two arms about his neck.

"Ah, Beth!" he murmured, "I knew your heart would send you back."

Beth indeed was near—just outside the window, through which she witnessed the whole scene, and, naturally, misunderstood it. Heartbroken, she crept away.

Dr. Wilson, calling on his old friend, witnessed Edwin's wrathful dismissal of the adventuress, empty-handed.

Beth had disappeared. One day Dr. Wilson received a note from her, saying she was very ill, "at Beech Cottage, Hamptonville, where I am known as Chalmers."

He responded immediately, and found Beth the mother of a sturdy baby boy. Her illness was mainly of the mind, caused by the shock of what she had seen through the window of her husband's home. The doctor was able to satisfy her that it was all a mistake.

"I was there," he said. "I witnessed the whole scene and can vouch for your husband's fidelity."

Listening now in content to her heart's call, Beth soon was able to accompany Dr. Wilson to the humble home which now seemed to her beyond comparison with any other.

"I've come home," she said, "baby and I, Edwin."

"God bless you," said Edwin, clasping mother and child to his heart. "God bless us all."

SOAP ON HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF, SCALP GETS DRY, HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25-cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse."

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

Garford Ten Ton Tractor and Trailer

Over 66% of Our Sales Are Repeat Orders

NOTHING can better prove the all-around efficiency of a motor truck than the amount of repeat orders which come after the initial trucks purchased have been given a good try out.

Garford repeat orders run over 66%.

This is a record.

And our repeat orders are not merely nominal. They are big transactions—often for 20 large chassis at a clip; often single orders involve over $100,000.00—and more.

The Garford truck is a practical ten year development—not a one-time first-year experiment. It has proved its worth and earned its salt in thousands of lines of business.

Garford trucks do more work in less time for less cost than any other truck made.

We can refer you to scores of prominent business men who will more than confirm this statement.

Garford trucks are working for the largest concerns in America—concerns who by cold and long experience can tell the difference between intrinsic and inflated values.

Garford trucks are working on some of the greatest industrial, municipal and railroad jobs in the country.

SOCIETY HEADS TANGO AT BIG SUFFRAGE BILL

Society women who are leading lights of the suffrage cause in Massachusetts flocked to the suffrage ball at the Copley-Plaza, with the result that today the committee banked the proceeds of 600 admissions at $2 and 600 supper tickets at 75 cents. The dancers "tangoed," "hesitated," "maxixed," waltzed and one-stepped to their hearts' content, and, incidentally, they displayed some remarkably beautiful gowns.

The real Argentine tango, with its sinuous movements, and the aviation waltz, graceful and esthetic, were features. These dances were given as an interpolation by Joseph Santley and the Misses Randall and Kernell, from "When Dreams Come True," at the Cort Theatre.

Miss Fanny C. Osgood, a neice of ex-Governor Draper, and Miss Fanny Jones, acted as "doormen" and took tickets. The ushers wore boutonnieres of yellow jonquils, and everywhere was heard the question, "Are you a suff? If not, why not?"

The box purchasers, most of whom had many friends with them, were Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean, Mrs. R. D. Evans, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. B. F. Pitman, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. R. G. Shaw, 2d, Mrs. Robert de Normandie, Mrs. Stuart Clark, Mrs. Oakes Ames, Mrs. Samuel McComb, Mrs. John C. Edwards and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow.

Among others present were Mrs. Richard Washburn Child, Mrs. Morris Gray, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. James Lee, Miss Caroline Amory, Miss Belle Hunt, Mrs. Arthur N. Milliken, Miss Abby Hunt, Miss Cordelia Jackson, Mrs. E. Preble Motley, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cabot, Miss Elizabeth Crafts, Mrs. Bryce Allen, Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield, Miss Elizabeth Bigelow, Mrs. Frederick Dumaine.

The receiving line included Mrs. B. F. Pitman, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Mrs. H. P. McKean, Mrs. Joseph Story Fay and Mrs. Wirt Dexter.

A large contingent of the younger suffragists spent the evening at the theatres and reached the hotel later. The ballroom, already a brilliant spectacle, became more so as the vari-colored gowns increased in number and helped to increase the kaleidoscopic effect on the witnesses of the dance.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

A great deal of interest is centred in the big racing meet at Santa Monica on Saturday and Monday next. These two events, namely, the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races, heretofore have been held in the South or in the East and in view of the fact that Santa Monica is a record course it is believed that all previous marks will go by the board.

Harry Grant of this city is looked upon as a dangerous claimant for the trophy. David Lewis, who met with a mishap while training on the coast on Tuesday last, is, according to all reports, in very good condition and is rapidly recovering from the effects of the mixup.

Hub School Teachers See Tango Danced

A number of Boston's school teachers interested in proper dancing witnessed the dancing of the tango, castle walk, the tiger and many other ragtime dances at No. 30 Huntington avenue, so that when they act as patronesses at school dances they will be able to act as censors. Mrs. J. Fred Kenny of Brookline and J. Jefferson Richards, a dancing teacher, gave the exhibition.

Tango Barred at Nashua School Dance

NASHUA, N. H., Feb. 19.—Charles H. Noyes, master of the local high school has informed the students that all dances at the juniors' reception and dance tonight must be polite and refined. Principal Noyes compared the so-called modern dances to a flying machine, and said that they will be forbidden.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

D. D. D. In Hospitals; Standard Skin Remedy

How many hospital patients, suffering the frightful itch, the raw, scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands.

THE SUPERVISING NURSE of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (name of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient: "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with this same soothing, healing fluid?

DR. GEO. T. RICHARDSON frankly writes: "D D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see!

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed—calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

They are authorized by the D. D. D. Laboratories to refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

TWO 'WIVES' IN HOWARTH WILL FIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The two marriages of John H. Howarth, a sporting goods manufacturer, who died leaving two wills, one in favor of his first wife, Mrs. Emma Howarth, a Boston woman, and the other to his second wife, Mrs. Maude Howarth, were explained in the Surrogate's Court in an attempt to prove the wills.

Mrs. Emma Howarth, who married Howarth in Boston, has insisted that an earlier will giving her the estate should be recognized. It has been maintained that neither woman knew of the other's existence until after Howarth's death, a few weeks ago.

Nathan Friedman, attorney for Maude Howarth, said: "Howarth legally married Emma Howarth, but left her twenty years ago and after some years obtained a divorce in the West. He then married the present Maude Howarth. Mrs. Howarth of Boston knew all about Mrs. Howarth of New York.

"More than this, Miss Clarice Howarth, a daughter, who resides with her mother in Boston, wrote loving letters which I have to her father's second wife. She came here and visited the woman and has spent a day with her since this action began."

Boston Ship Puts in for Coal Supply

Plan Injunction Ban in Labor Wars

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19. — Announcement that the use of injunctions in labor disputes probably would be forbidden and trade unions exempted from the operations of the Sherman anti-trust law during the present session of Congress, and if not a big fight would be made on the House floor to bring about these changes, was made today in a statement issued by Representative Buchanan of Illinois.

Ask $5,000,000 More for Postoffices

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The postoffice appropriation bill carrying a total of $310,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 over the House bill, was reported to the Senate today by Chairman Bankhead of the Committee on Postoffices and Postroads. He said he would ask the Senate to begin consideration of the bill February 23.

Stories about Stage Folk

As They Jest in "September Morn"

A brief dualogue between Argentina, a professional dancer, and Bunkum, her press agent, which you will hear when the show comes to town.

BUNKUM—Do you ever expect to succeed in comic opera?

Argentina—Yes. Of course!

Bunkum—When?

Argentina—Just as soon as I lose what is left of my voice.

• • •

BUNKUM—Don't you realize that musical comedy is on its last legs?

Argentina—Sure! That's why the public is rushing to see the legs.

• • •

ARGENTINA (Angrily)—You kissed me when I was asleep there in the hammock!

Bunkum (Rattled)—Y-e-s; but—but only once!

Argentina—Only once? Why, I counted seven times before I woke up!

• • •

BUNKUM—We men can make our own way in the world!

Argentina—Yes, you can! A man is born of a woman; his nurse is a woman; his school teacher is a woman; he makes a fool of himself at least once over a woman; he marries a woman; and, when he thinks of heaven at all, it is just because all the pictures of angels wear skirts!

Epigrams From "Disraeli."

Lots of us heard these uttered by George Arliss in Louis M. Parker's Great Play.

A VISIT to a country home is a series of meals mitigated by the new dresses of the ladies.

SOME people have great knowledge of society and little of mankind.

THE action of woman on our destiny is unceasing. And there is no mortification, however keen; no misery, however desperate, which the spirit of woman cannot in some degree lighten or alleviate.

Sherlock Holmes' Philosophy

Lines That Fall to the Actor of the Deductive Sleuth in "The Speckled Band," which was first produced right here in Boston.

MY DEAR, dear Watson! There's just one way to deal with one's enemy. First find out just what the fellow is doing—and then do something different!

• • •

DON'T underestimate anybody's ability. The most successful tragedian I ever knew was a chap at whom the public laughed when he played Hamlet. So he took to playing comic parts, and the public laughed no longer.

• • •

MY DEAR, dear Watson! The reason why I ignore all your suggestions is that I desire to keep your friendship. If I ever once acted in accordance with your advice you would despise me as a weakling!

• • •

AND here is one widely quoted speech of Sherlock Holmes that doesn't occur once in "The Speckled Band," much to the chagrin of the professional slangsters:

"Quick, Watson!—the needle!"

CROSS QUESTIONS ANSWERED CROSSLY.

DEAR EDITOR—Why are actors often referred to as hams?—IRRATATION.

Because they are often roasted.

• • •

DEAR EDITOR—My husband often comes home in an intoxicated condition, but always says he never intended to get drunk in the first place. What would you advise?—MRS. I. N. EBRIATE.

Advise him to fight shy of the last place.

• • •

EDITOR—How high is it proper for a young woman to hold her skirts on a rainy day?—IMA BRUTE.

It is all a matter of form, dear.

A TEXAS church is to have a roof garden. Thus, if the pastor cannot cause his flock to approach heaven through the medium of sermons he can send them a little higher by inviting them to the roof garden.

The Dear Fool

The Story of the Love of a Woman of 40 for a Boy of 22

Novelized by

A. A. Waterbury

From the Broadway play by H. V. Esmond now playing in New York. Copyright, 1914, by International News Service.

"WHO'S paying you back?" asked Ethel.

"God is. Don't you see it? He's paying me back."

"What for?" asked Ethel.

Betty shivered slightly. "I don't know—I wasn't thinking—How much is he hurt? Is he in pain? How much is he hurt—won't any one tell?"

Bill came on tip-toe to the hall door; he looked in and saw his mother, and with a little hushed cry of joy he ran to her.

"Mummy; oh, mummy, darling, where have you been?"

He put his arms around her—but she hardly noticed him and answered his questions mechanically. Her mind and heart were with the little lad over whom the pitiful fight was being waged and not with the sturdy chap who stood before her hale and hearty and well.

"I went to the opera with Mrs. Palgraive to hear Caruso sing and then I stayed the night with her," said Betty mechanically.

"But you couldn't have, mummy, because Mrs. Palgraive was here. She's in the garden now—she came to inquire about Jack."

Betty's face was suddenly stripped of all its light and joy. It became a frozen mask of pain.

Sir Egbert spoke with calm authority:

"It doesn't matter, Bill. Mummy's here now, so it's all right. Go back to Mrs. Palgraive and tell her there's no news yet. We—we're all waiting for news now."

"Can't I stay with mummy?"

"No, go back to Mrs. Palgraive."

And the boy went disconsolately back to the garden.

Betty spoke as in a trance: "Last night—how trivial it all seems now—hardly worth lying about—I was with Cecil. He—he went this morning and Jack—my baby boy. . . ."

"Oh, please, Betty, please—said Sir Egbert trying to stop her from her flagellation of herself.

"I won't try to go in. You may trust me. I don't deserve to be there—perhaps if I were, God wouldn't let him get well—perhaps through my baby.—I won't go in—I promise I won't go in—only let me wait just outside the door."

He let her pass and she walked over and stood there, leaning her weary head against the portal.

Sir Egbert turned and looked at Ethel. Betty was so far from them—so far away in the land of her own thoughts that they two might talk and talk and she would never be conscious of a word they might say.

"Did you hear what she said?" asked Ethel.

"Yes." That monosyllable was all the man could venture.

"Do you realize the meaning of what she said?"

"Yes."

"What must we do?"

"Forget it."

The two stared silently at each other for a moment. At last the man turned away from the concentrated coldness of Ethel's greenish eyes and took up a book to cover his glances that strayed again and again with growing anxiety at the stricken figure leaning against the door.

The Woman Thou Gavest Me

HALL CAINE'S GREATEST STORY

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

FOURTH PART

I FALL IN LOVE

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

"Why not?" he said, in the tone of one who meant, "Who's keeping you?"

Then in my weakness I spoke to Alma, who answered:

"Certainly, my sweet girl. We shall miss you dreadfully, but it's your duty. And then you'll see that dear Mr. . . . What d'ye callum?"

Finally, feeling myself a poor, pitiful hypocrite, I apologized for my going away to the guests also, and they looked as if they might say: "We'll survive it, perhaps."

That night before my departure my maid said:

"Perhaps your ladyship has forgotten that my time's up, but I'll stay until you return if you want me to."

I asked her if she would like to stay with me altogether and she said:

"Indeed, I should, my lady. Any woman would like to stay with a good mistress, if she is a little quick sometimes. And if you don't want me to go to your father's I may be of some use to you here before you come back again."

I saw that her mind was still running on divorce, but I did not reprove her now, for mine was turning in the same direction.

Next morning most of the guests came to the hall door to see me off, and they gave me a shower of indulgent smiles as the motor-car moved away.

Fifty-ninth Chapter

BEFORE going to my father's house I went to the Bishop's. Bishop's Court is at the other side of the island, and it was noon before I drove under its tall elm trees, in which a vast concourse of crows seemed to be holding a sort of general congress.

The Bishop was then at his luncheon, and after luncheon (so his liveried servant told me) he usually took a siesta. I have always thought it was unfortunate for my interview that it came between his food and his sleep.

The little reception-room into which I was shown was luxuriously, not to say gorgeously, appointed, with easy chairs and sofas, a large portrait of the Pope, signed by the Holy Father himself, and a number of pictures of great people of all kinds—dukes, marquises, lords, counts—as well as photographs of fashionable ladies in low dress inscribed in several languages to "My dear Father in God the Lord Bishop of Ellan."

The Bishop came to me after a few minutes, smiling and apparently at peace with all the world. Except that he wore a biretta he was dressed—as in Rome—in his long black soutane with its innumerable buttons, his silver-buckled shoes, his heavy gold chain and jewelled cross.

He welcomed me in his smooth and suave manner, asking if he could offer me a little refreshment, but too full of my mission to think of eating and drinking; I plunged immediately into the subject of my visit.

"Monsignor," I said, "I am in great trouble. It is about my marriage."

The smile was smitten away from the bishop's face by this announcement.

"I am sorry," he said. "Nothing serious, I trust?"

I told him it was very serious, and straightforward I began on the spiritual part of my grievance—that my husband did not love me, that he loved another woman, that the sacred sacrament of my marriage. . . .

"Wait" said the bishop, and he rose to close the window, for the clamor of the crows was deafening—a trial must have been going on in the trees. Returning to his seat he said:

"Dear lady, you must understand that there is one offence, and only one, which in all Christian countries and civilized communities is considered sufficient to constitute a real and tangible grievance. Have you any evidence of that?"

TRYING TO BE BLIND

I knew what he meant and I felt myself coloring to the roots of my hair. But gulping down my shame I recounted the story of the scene in Paris and gave a report of my maid's charges and surmises.

"Humph!" said the bishop, and I saw in a moment that he was going to belittle my proofs.

"Little or no evidence of your own, apparently. Chiefly that of your maid. And ladies' maids are notoriou mischiefmakers."

"But it is true," I said. "My husband will not deny it. He cannot."

"So far as I am able to observe what passes in the world," said the bishop, "men in such circumstances always can and do deny it."

I felt my hands growing moist under my gloves. I thought the bishop was trying to be blind to what he did not wish to see.

"But I'm right, I'm sure I'm right," I said.

"Well, assuming you are right, what is it, dear lady, that you wish me to do?"

For some minutes I felt like a fool, but I stammered out at length that I had come for his direction and to learn what relief the church could give me.

"H'm!" said the bishop, and then crossing one leg over the other, and fumbling the silver buckle of his shoe, he said:

"The church, dear lady, does indeed provide alleviation in cases of dire necessity. It provides the relief of separation—always deploring the necessity and hoping for ultimate reconciliation. But to sanction the separation of a wife from her husband because—pardon me, I do not say this is your case—she finds that he does not please her, or because—again I do not say this is your case—she fancies that somebody else pleases her better. . . ."

"Monsignor," I said, feeling hot and dizzy, "we need not discuss separation. I am thinking of something much more serious."

Never shall I forget the expression of the bishop's face. He looked aghast.

"My good lady, surely you are not thinking of divorce?"

I think my head must have dropped as in silent assent, for in a preemptory and condemnatory manner the bishop took me to task, asking if I did not know that the Catholic Church did not recognize divorce under any circumstances, and if I had forgotten what the Holy Father himself (pointing up to the portrait) had said to me—that when I entered into the solmen contract of holy matrimony I was to do so in the full consciousness that it could not be broken but by death.

"The love in which husband and wife contract to hold each other in holy wedlock is typified by the love of Christ for His church, and as the one can never be broken, neither can the other."

Chatter You Hear in Hotel Lobbies

Too Good for Vienna.

JULIAN ELTINGE told one on himself which is just getting around. Several years ago, at the outset of his career as a female impersonator, he was appearing in a music hall in Vienna.

The Viennese, apparently, are hard to deceive.

At the finish of his act he pulled off his wig, bowed and walked off, as he did in America.

The next day the leading Vienna paper came out with a stinging criticism of the singer, entitled, "The Latest American Bunk."

Speaking of Eltinge, it said: "A woman with closely cropped hair sings two or three ditties, pulls off her wig and then struts off the stage like a man, trying to make you believe she is a female impersonator."

News to Tommy.

SPEAKING of the public school and the struggles of some of the pretty little teachers the other afternoon, Congressman William C. Adams of Georgia told of the slowness of Tommy Jones in grasping history.

In a certain country school the class in history was being examined, and noticing that one or the small boys seemed more interested in the world beyond the schoolroom than in his lesson the teacher addressed him rather sharply.

"Tommy," said she, "you are not paying a bit of attention to me! Look this way at once."

"Yes, ma'am," responded Tommy, shifting his eyes from the trees and fields to the teacher.

"Tommy," quickly continued the teacher, "how long has Columbus been dead?"

"How long has he been dead, Miss Mary?" replied Tommy wonderingly. "Gee, I didn't even know the guy was sick!"

Keeping It for Evidence.

AN Irish soldier on sentry duty had orders to allow no one to smoke near his post. An officer with a lighted cigar approached, whereupon Pat boldly challenged him and ordered him to put it out at once. The officer, with a gesture of disgust, threw away his cigar, but no sooner was his back turned than Pat picked it up and quietly retired to the sentry box. The officer, happening to look around, observed a beautiful cloud of smoke issuing from the box. He at once challenged Pat for smoking on duty.

"Smoking, is it, sur? Bedad, an' I'm only keeping it lit to show to the corporal when he comes as evidence agin you!"

The Retort Apropos.

A CERTAIN millionaire did not approve of foreign missions. One Sunday at church, when the collection was being taken up for these missions, the collector approached the millionaire and held out the collection plate. The millionaire shook his head.

"I never give to missions," he whispered.

"Then take something out of the plate, sir," whispered the collector. "The money is for the heathen."

She Knew.

IT was young Mrs. Robinson's first dinner party, and she was suffering all the usual terrors of the inexperienced hostess.

However, the cook rose to the occasion splendidly, and, so far as the dinner itself was concerned, Mrs. Robinson was delighted.

The only fly in the ointment was Jane. Jane was the new parlor maid; she was slow, clumsy, and her waiting was bad. But, in addition to these faults, she insisted on keeping her mouth wide open.

This so got on Mrs. Robinson's nerves that at last she exclaimed:

"Jane, your mouth is wide open!"

Jane withdrew her gaze from the ceiling, and said, looking down with a cheery smile:

"I know it is, ma'am; I opened it myself!"

The Boy Knew.

THE doctor was bandaging the small boy's arm after vaccination, when the little chap interrupted him.

"Put it on the other arm, doctor," he said.

"Why, no," said the physician; "I want to put the bandage on your sore arm, so that the boys at school won't hit you on it."

"Put it on the other arm, doc," reiterated the small boy. "You don't know the fellows at our school."

The Classic, Classy Bard.

By LEE W. NELSON.

THE U. S. A., I pause to say, is no place for a rising bard;
Where Pegasus must up and cuss because to rhyme's so awful hard;
I can't explain, in language plain, the difficulties we must face
In metric time, to write our rhyme, without our language to deface.
In days gone by we could decry the poet's horse soar as he sang;
But now? Good night! We cannot write, without resorting unto slang.

• • •

"I gotcha, kid." "Look whatcha did," "Whatchamean, yah lost yer goat,"
"Can the chatter," such like patter's English as she should be wrote.
"Let 'er dribble," "Isch ka bibble," and, "Aw, can de noise."
"I should worry," "Watsa hurry," "Pipe de chicken, boys";
Do you wonder that we blunder o'er our lines of verse,
That we turn gray when we must say words t'which we are averse?
Now we, the poets, are the goats and in protest raise a hand,
But we can't choose, for we must use the chosen language of the land!

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Unclubby Conduct by M'Adoo

If Secretary McAdoo continues to give free exhibitions of his prowess at the tango he is likely to hear from somebody higher up.

The Cabinet price for entertaining is $300 a night and a share of the gate. When Cabinet members go gallivanting around the country dancing or speaking, or yodling for nothing, it is easy to see that there will be a disastrous break in the price.

Let Mr. McAdoo be apprised that if he doesn't need the money there are other members of the Cabinet who have heavy fixed charges, and who will resent unfair competition. Hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury must not think of tangoing for less than fifteen cents a step.

This Rock Shall Fly, Etc.

When lovely woman takes a trolley she stands upon the steps awhile because she knows it's merely folly to try to wedge along the aisle. And though a dozen men beseech her to step aside and let them by, the timid, gentle little creature regards them with a haughty eye, and though their language grows unkinder, she stands there with unruffled mind until the gentlemen behind her give up and take the car behind.

What Do They Have to Eat?

Those gridiron dinners must be dreadfully indigestible. Mr. Wilson seems to get ill every time he receives an invitation to one of them.

Speaking of the Income Tax

Death and taxes are equally inevitable, but you don't have to hire a lawyer to tell you how to die.

The Hotel Was on Fire

"Hotel in Briell, N. J., in Which Stevenson Wrote Burns," says the New York Times in a headline. For a time this perplexed us. We fancied that Robert Burns had passed on before Stevenson did much letter writing. And we could think of no reason why he should write William J. Burns who was then a mere boy. Just as we were about to write W. J. ourselves and ask him what Stevenson wrote him we had a flash of inspiration and solved the riddle.

Song by a Scientist

Eugenists declare that particles of matter select their affinities more wisely than human beings.

The atom and the cell
Chose their partners very well,
The molecule gets suited to a T,
The tiny protoplasms
Bridge love's dark abysmal chasms,
They've all got a lot on me.

Corroborative Evidence

The confession of a man who has been convicted of a murder in the first degree is confirmatory, but it will not affect the result to any appreciable extent.

WOMEN WEAR WIGS COLORED TO MATCH GOWN

"Marie, I will wear my purple hair to Mrs. Somerset's dinner tonight."

"Yes, madame."

"And [illegible] sure to get my new 'vasco' rose hair from [illegible] tomorrow, because I shall need it to wear at the opera with the new rose gown which was sent home today."

"Very well, madame."

This is no impossible conversation. It is the very instructions that Boston women of fashion may be giving soon to their maids, now that a different colored wig, to match every gown, is the latest feminine craze.

Time was when women [illegible] they went pretty far [illegible] gowns. But now the gown [illegible].

It is impossible to dye [illegible] every day, but wigs [illegible] may [illegible] worn [illegible] along and [illegible] just come over to New York [illegible] Boston.

If you see a Back Bay woman [illegible] the opera with peacock blue hair [illegible] is not a member of a newly [illegible] race. She is merely [illegible] Boston self—only with her [illegible] wig on.

Smartest London society is [illegible] itself like [illegible] Mrs. George Keppel's [illegible] dinner for her daughter Miss [illegible] Keppel, according to [illegible] from the other side [illegible] wore a green blue wig [illegible] nation," as they [illegible] Grosvenor's was [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] was striking [illegible].

The Hon. Mrs. [illegible] most beautiful women in all London, wore a "transformation" of [illegible] with a cerise or [illegible].

The leading wig colors [illegible] peacock blue, "vasco" rose [illegible] sheer purple green [illegible].

The wig must match the [illegible] material of the gown. Or, to be extra smart, the wig should harmonize with the gown and match some trimming or ornament.

"'Slogger' Williams'" Death Upsets Old "Tom Brown" Tradition—Latest Gossip of the International Cup Race—Another Yale-Harvard Battle.

By WALTER CAMP.

SOME [illegible] died in London the Rev. Augustus Orlebar [illegible] "Slogger" Williams [illegible]

[illegible] Orlebar "Tom Brown," had fainted.

So would disappear another cherished illusion of our boyhood days. If Tom didn't win [illegible] then we must go back to the days [illegible] and readjust our views of life all over again.

[illegible] many a youth will go on believing that Tom did win the fight and will be the better for his [illegible].

AMATEUR TO STEER THE SHAMROCK.

A VERY interesting feature of the next yacht race for the America Cup will be that W. P. Burton, whom Sir Thomas Lipton has secured for his helmsman, is the first amateur who has steered a cup challenger since Mr. Beaver Webb sailed the Galatea against the Mayflower in 1886.

Mr. Burton is unquestionably the best amateur in England today, and besides winning the blue ribbon for [illegible] in Europe for three years [illegible] he has won two King's Cups and in all kinds of races in which he has competed during the last sixteen years amounting to something over 600 matches [illegible] prizes.

Now, of course, there is a great deal of [illegible] as to what Shamrock IV will be like. Charles Nicholson [illegible] drawn the lines for the [illegible] challenger of Sir Thomas Lipton [illegible] designer who has had wonderful success with less craft, and there is much British confidence in [illegible].

Some think that the product will prove a [illegible] design, and it is now being stated in London dispatches, that the [illegible] Shamrock will have a centre-board. At any rate, the greatest secrecy is being preserved, even to the extent of allowing none but [illegible] men to work on the laying of the keel.

The boat is being built in a closed in shed with glass roof, no possible precaution being neglected to guard her from the curious eye. W. P. Burton, as stated, will, it is understood [illegible], and, as he is generally conceded to be the leading [illegible] day, there [illegible] confidence growing [illegible] circles.

Captain Turner will be Mr. Burton's [illegible] was who [illegible] on in the early nineties. A crew of the new Shamrock [illegible] of many [illegible] who sailed with Mr. Burton in [illegible] Ostara, the [illegible] boats with which he won the two King's Cups.

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

SUCH IS LIFE.
(By J. Evers)

Lives of managers remind us,
Though the owner's words are kind
It may some day creep behind us
With a brickbat in his hand

"My interests," quoth Mr. Murphy, "are Charles Murphy and the Chicago club." One can readily believe the first part of it.

These are bad days for kings. King Manuel had his Gaby Deslys, and the Keystone King had his Gabby Murphy.

We rejoice to see Artie Hofman back in the majors, but we grieve to see so fine a lad playing in St. Louis.

By this time next year Henry O'Day will be the most envied baseball manager extant. He will have been fired by Garry Herrmann and Charlie Murphy.

PROHIBITION

According to Abe Martin, Prohibition should reduce the cost of living—likewise the desire.

The man with phosphorescent oxaline in his ego says mox-nix-ouse. He eats and drinks what he pleases. He knows that temperate indulgence maintains his mental balance, keeps his cosmic sparker buzzing and gives hep to the red blood corpuscles.

"Four Roses Rye" is a fourteen-year-old beverage whiskey without competition. This glorious draught is flavored with surprise, nothing else. Ask your dealer for a quart of this eternal internal sunshine. It decorates the sideboard and initiates you into the cheerful life.

COURT MARTIAL FOR MURPHY OF THE CUBS

By W. J. MACBETH.

Charles Webb Murphy, the talkative owner of the Chicago Cubs, is to be court martialed [illegible] Saturday afternoon.

Governor Tener has instructed all his National League club presidents to be on hand for the impeachment at Garry Herrmann's town.

While [illegible] gave the president of the [illegible] major league absolute authority to deal with Murphy, Governor Tener has decided to put the case squarely up to the men who control the franchises.

A couple of the National magnates suggested that Cincinnati had been chosen because it is the home of Charles P. Taft, the 'angel' who put Murphy in control of the West Side Park, Chicago. A direct appeal to Mr. Taft is to be made if Murphy continues his defiance.

While ostensibly the Cincinnati gathering directly concerns only the Board of Directors of the National League, every club president has been asked to attend, so that the utmost pressure may be brought to bear upon the refractory solon.

John C. Toole, the league's attorney, has been delving into all the papers at National League headquarters, so as to familiarize himself with Murphy's career. He has expressed an opinion that Murphy may be suppressed in one of several ways. All Murphy's associates will stand behind Tener and Johnson in any action necessary to make Murphy take to the tall and uncut.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Much Embarrassed at Warren's Conduct at a Church Entertainment

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

THE lighted stained-glass windows of the church shone dimly through the rain. They turned up the brick walk and made their way around under the dripping trees to the side entrance, where the light flooded out.

In the vestibule a young man collected the tickets, while through the open door of the lecture room, where the play was to be given, came a buzz of conversation.

"No danger of anybody around here swiping an umbrella?" asked Warren facetiously, as he deposited his in the corner.

Helen gasped. What a dreadful thing to say in a church! But the young man answered Warren's pleasantry with an amused smile.

"I guess you'll find it safe, sir." Then with a glance at the overcrowded hat-racks. "You can put our wraps in the chapel if you like."

In the dimly-lit chapel the rows of npty pews and the white-sheeted lpit chairs loomed up ghostly nong the shadows. A number of aincoats and wraps were thrown ver a railing near the door.

"Dear, you see we're not late," whispered Helen triumphantly, as free from their wraps they now entered the lecture room.

There were no reserved seats, and except for a few chairs in the front and last rows the place was crowded. To Helen's embarrassment Warren strode straight up in front.

"Oh, isn't this too near?" for they were almost against the "orchestra," which consisted of a piano and a violinist, who was now tuning up. "Hadn't we better go further back?"

"Not much. I came all the way from Boston to see Maxwell in this show, and I'm not going to take any back seat."

"Hush, dear, not so loud," for Warren's gruff undertone sounded startlingly loud amid the decorous, subdued whisperings.

Helen was uncomfortably conscious of the many inquiring glances directed at them. She knew that in the village church every one knew every one else, and that the people in the seats back of them were wondering who they could be.

HELEN IS NERVOUS

There was a forceful air about Warren that always made him conspicuous, and Helen hoped fervently that the scathing comments on the play, which she feared he would make, would not be overheard.

A printed program lay on the chair beside her.

"THE CINNAMON CLUB," Presents
"THE WINNER WINS,"
A Comedy of the West, in the Lecture room of the First——Church,
Blankford.

Then came the "cast" and a "synopsis" of the three acts.

"Here's Max," chuckled Warren, pointing to the fourth character. "'Bert Clifford, the Ardent Lover—J. C. Maxwell.' The Ardent lover! That's rich! Hardly spoke to a girl in his life."

Then the red denim curtains were drawn hitchingly aside on "Act 1. Living room of John Perkins' house on a Texas ranch."

The furnishing of the "living room" consisted of a table set for breakfast, four chairs, a couch, a few knick-knacks and an Indian blanket hung on the wall to give the "Western" atmosphere.

Texana, the Perkins' "hired girl," was hovering over the table. Her hair, braided out in horns, was tied with bright pink ribbons, and she made it clear from her first line that hers was the "character" part which was to furnish most of the comedy.

Then Mrs. Perkins entered, a rather pretty young woman, plainly frightened. Her voice was high pitched and shrill, and she stood stiffly at the side of the stage with her hankerchief in her hand during this scintillating bit of dialogue.

Mrs. Perkins—"Good morning, Texana. I see you have flowers on the table this morning."

Texana (Bobbing and grinning)—"Mornin', Mis' Perkins. Yes, I wanted to have things look purty. I reckon like as not Mr. Clifford'll come courtin' long o' Miss Jean today."

Mrs. Perkins—"The idea. You shouldn't get such notions, Texana."

Texana — "Can't help it, Mis' Perkins, ma'am. There is nothin' in the world like love—sweet love."

"Oh, lord!" groaned Warren.

Then Mr. Perkins came on in boots and riding breeches, and they sat down to breakfast.

REAL COFFEE

"Why that's real coffee," whispered Helen as Mrs. Perkins poured out the coffee steaming hot.

Warren grinned. "Guess they need some sort of bracer to get through this play."

Then the door was thrown open and "Jean—the girl from the East" burst in. Apparently the Cinnamon Club had not wanted to go to the expense of a riding habit, so they had faked one out of an old linen suit, that Jean might make her entry consistent with her speech.

It was a long speech, full of flowery phrases about her "glorious" ride through the hills and dales, the prairie breeze and the sky dappled with clouds. She gave it as though it were a commencement recitation, and in the same high-pitched voice.

"She's the girl that Max makes love to," nudged Warren.

Hardly had Texana cleared the table after the two-minute breakfast, when there was a knock that shook the flimsy door, and in came Jack Maxwell. Warren dropped his program and clapped uproariously.

"Don't—don't," whispered Helen pleadingly, pulling at his arm. As no one else was clapping, the sound was startling.

But Warren did not stop until Maxwell glanced out and acknowledged the applause with a twitching grin under his false mustache.

If Helen had not been so embarrassed at Warren's conduct, she would have been convulsed at the stilted way in which they all stood around the stage and spouted their speeches in the commencement style of oratory.

Maxwell was tall and thin, with a voice surprisingly deep in contrast to the high-pitched tones of the girls. He evidently took his part most seriously, and Helen thought that once or twice he looked out in annoyance at Warren's ill-concealed chuckles."

The play was undoubtedly written by an aspiring playwright of the Cinnamon Club, and its amateurish lines, combined with the amateur acting, produced a real comedy.

But the redeeming feature of it all was Jean's adorable prettiness, and when in the last act Maxwell caught her in his arms, Warren muttered, "Lucky Dog."

BEHIND THE STAGE

When the red curtain hitched to after the final touching scene, Warren made straight for the door beside the stage. Feeling that they had no right to intrude behind the scenes, Helen hung back, but he beckoned to her peremptorily. Reluctantly she followed, feeling self-conscious and very much out of place.

She looked for Maxwell to greet Warren with effusive cordiality, but now to her surprise he was quite cool. He had taken off his false mustache and was wiping off the grease paint with a towel.

He bowed formally to Helen when Warren introduced her, but he evinced none of the hearty good-fellowship that Helen had naturally expected.

A number of the audience had now made their way back to congratulate the actors. And on all sides were heard gushing commments of how "splendidly" the play had "gone off," and how "beautifully" every one had acted.

Helen thought that of course Mr. Maxwell would show them around, explain the various crude devices, and then walk with them to the station. But he merely expressed his regret that they had had so bad an evening to come up, and asked if they were going back on the 10:55.

They had intended taking the later train, but now Warren glanced at his watch with a casual look.

"Yes, we'll just about have time to make that.",

With a brief good-bye they went back to the dim chapel for their wraps. Helen's cheeks were burning with a fierce resentment. She could hardly wait until they were outside before she broke out indignantly.

"What WAS the matter? What MADE him so cool? After we had come all the way from Boston to see him—why he was hardly civil!"

"Oh, Maxwell's all right. He's a mighty fine fellow—best ever. He was just rattled, that's all."

"No, that WASN'T all! He was just as cool as he could be! And to think we came all the way out here in the rain to see that silly play!" Helen's indignation was growing.

"Well, he may be a little sore. I've guyed him pretty hard about that play. But Max's a good fellow—he's all right. He'll come around."

It was still raining, and Helen clung close to Warren's arm as they trudged to the station through the dark village streets. Her disapproval and embarrassment at his conduct in the church was now forgotten in her consuming indignation at Maxwell's slighting attitude. It had amounted almost to a snub. That any one should snub Warren!

In spite of the chilled mist that blew in her face, Helen's cheeks still burned hotly. She had conceived a profound animosity for this man. She had never met him before, and she never wanted to meet him again. For a mild, meek little woman, Helen's thoughts were almost revengeful.

Warren had been slighted! And with the primitive woman instinct she was up in arms in his defence.

The Oracle

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

HIGH on the slopes of Parnassus, in ancient Greece, near the city of Delphi, was a long, thin gash in the mountain side, and out of it streamed thin shreds of vapor all day long into the sunbright world. Blowing to the nostrils of goats that fed on the hills it sent them dancing in wildering circles; and watching them the little goat-herds stood terrified and amazed. So they, too, fascinated, came close and breathed of the stifling mist. And quick as a wink they, too, began to snap their fingers and kick and dance high and whirl over the sweet green grass. And all Delphi then came out on the hills to watch with round eyes and superstition whispering in their ears. Out of the mouths of the dancing goats and the twirling herd-boys came such odd and inspired raving that the simple people thought of the reason of it all right away. "Ho," said the King—"Prophesy—that's what it is! The Gods have whispered in their ear—and now they're trying to tell it." So after a great deal of flying about and fussing and running hither and there—over the thin veils of vapor, they set a golden tripod; and after that, year in, year out—under the azure sky and the big bright moon—on the tripod sat a priestess. And to her came all the Greek world to know their fate a-coming. And she—intoxicated by the breath of the Gods—murmured things that they faitofully believed were answering their questions. If they didn't they twisted the words about and tried to believe they did. And this was called the ORACLE of Delphi. This odorous, dazing vapor that drifted in old Greece from a strange cleft in the mountain of Parnassus.

So Love is an Oracle in more ways than one. The gift of one tiny field rose from the fingers of a simple girl will bring as good an answer as the camellias and gardenias of the wealthy girl's will win. But, like the Oracle of Delphi, he doesn't always tell the rtuth—though I believe he honestly tries to tell what love and life hold for you—for the reason that sometimes he doesn't know himself. And like the worshipful people of Greece who yearned to believe and know—the girls who wait at his feet for his answer with lips apart and eyes ashine—try to twist his answer into the best for them—try to believe even when his answer is a warning—that all's well and the world well lost for love.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PERHAPS YOU IMAGINE IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and I have kept company with a pretty girl of the same age for three months, and I love her very much and I believe she loves me. Our love seems to be dying away, because we are never together any more, as we used to be.

I happen to meet this girl once in a while at a reception, but something seems to hold me back from talking to her. I am a little bashful. N. C. P.

YOUR diffidence puts her at a disadvantage. No doubt she thinks you no longer care for her, and it is up to you to show by renewed attention that you do.

THEY ARE SELFISH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of twenty-one and make a nice appearance.

I have a few young men call on me at times. They are about twenty-five years and over.

The main question which I wish to ask you is, Why do these young men never ask me to go out when they call? They always stay in the house, never asking me about going out.

PUZZLED.

I FEAR you have become acquainted with a selfish bunch of young men. Don't be at home when they call. Remember that there is nothing gained by a friendship that is so unpromising of any attempts at reciprocity.

TRY DIPLOMACY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am tewnty-four and engaged to be married. My friend is twenty, and we both love each other dearly, but lately she got the dance craze and I don't like it. We quarrel about it and I do everything in my power to stop her, but all in vain.

ANXIOUS.

REBUKES having failed, try encouragement. Go with her to all the dances, find some girl there who attracts you, and express the desire to go to the next dance that you may see this girl again. Find no fault with your sweetheart's conduct, but make yourself so interested in other girls you are oblivious to all she does.

YOU FOOLISH BOY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a girl of the same age. The other day she told me that she has "dearly" loved another one. Although she told me she doesn't care for him any more, I try to keep away from her, as I am afraid that this proverb will after a while give me trouble—"Half burned wood can easily be kindled."

SIXTEEN.

MAN-LIKE, you reserve for yourself the privilege of falling in love often, but demand that you be this girl's first love.

You are only sixteen. Wait until you are old enough to be just before you take to yourself the right to dictate any woman's conduct.

Miss Fairfax Talks On:

The Way of a Woman

I Know That the Jealous Heart of a Man Demands That He Be First in the Heart of the Woman He Loves

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IT was ever the custom of a woman to hang the picture of her dead husband on the walls of memory and occasionally flaunt his perfections before the eyes of the man who has taken his place. It is a way that is distressing, aggravating and unkind and that bears no good results.

It is a way, thank heaven, that few maidens know, for every girl knows that if she wishes to keep her lover she must make no moans for the lover she has lost. The wife secure in legal possession, is not so wise.

"I am a young man of twenty-two," writes Dick, "and am keeping company with a young lady of twenty. I love her dearly, but every time I meet her she takes delight in talking about a young man to whom she was once engaged. Is it wise for me to make love to her when she is always talking about this man she used to love, and whom she still seems to love?"

It would not mean peace of mind for a man to marry any girl whose heart is in keeping of another man and who makes that possession the subject of her thoughts and conversation. There are "dead men's shoes" that may be worn comfortably — so comfortably that one in time forgets they were made for another's feet, but they pinch and squeeze and rub and bind, making callous spots and tender places, if there stands a woman with out-pointed finger crying out with a loud voice the greater perfections and fewer faults of the man for whose feet they were fashioned.

A MAN'S HEART

I know that the jealous heart of every man demands that he be first in the heart of the woman he loves, and I also know that the wise maiden makes a man believe he is first, though to find the first boy she loved she would have to go back to her primer days at school, and she has changed the film every year since. I know that while this may be duplicity, it is a duplicity that finds ample excuse in the unreasoning jealousy of mankind, and that means greater happiness and comfort and peace of mind for the man it would deceive.

The girl who entertains her lover with a recital of the charms of a man who loves her no longer may be honest in her refusal to claim an empty shrine in her heart, but it is an honesty that is aggressively disagreeable, and that doesn't spell happiness for the second lover.

Fight fire with fire! Go away back among your yesterdays and revive the memory of a former sweetheart, giving her all the added glory that absence and time allow. Speak of her with tenderness, enthusiasm and regret, and every time the girl you now love drags forth the ghost of her past let yours come forth to do battle.

There will be only one result; either the girl will be cured or you will have no desire to cure her, losing what longing you may now have to supplant her former lover.

THEY ARE FATAL

Either result, my dear Dick, is better than marriage to a woman who hangs the picture of a former lover on the walls, that she may use it to flaunt the man who has succeeded him. Comparisons are odious when made with men and affairs of today. When made with men and affairs of yesterday they are fatal.

Little Bobbie's Pa

OUCH, sed Pa laste nite wen he got up from the dinner tabel. I beleeve I am going to have a case of the roomatism.

What maiks you think it is roomatism? sed Ma. You never had it befoar.

No, sed Pa, but neerly all the day long I have had cramps & pains in the back of my neck.

That isent from roomatism, sed Ma. I know what maiks that. You have a stiff neck. No wonder, eether, after beeing out all the evening with that old fool astronomer, looking up at the stars. If you are going to git that star gazing hobby, sed Ma, you ought to get a hand mirror & look down into that wen you go out in the starlight. What in the wurld do you want to spend a whole evening gazing at stars for? sed Ma.

It is very interesting to me, sed Pa.

You doant need to stay out till three in the morning, Ma sed. What does the astronomer's wife say to him wen he cums hoam so lait?

Oh, she luvs him & his work so much that she is perfeckly willing to let him look at the stars as long as he wants to.

Jest then a frend of Pa caim to the house to spend a hour. His naim is Paddy McGuire, & he is a good old fellow. He always brings me a baseball or a punching bag or sumthing. He is fine to me & Pa likes him the best of anybody he knows, but Ma says he is too sporty.

Well, Mac, sed Pa, how to you feel to-nite? I have a littel touch of roomatism.

I suppose you caught a littel cold list nite, sed Pa's frend.

That is what I was telling him, sed Ma. I toald him that he cuddent expeck to go out looking at stars without gitting a stiff neck.

I was with him & I saw the stars, too, sed Mister McGuire. Pa was shaking his hed at his frend, but Mister McGuire dident see him.

You say you were with him looking at stars? sed Ma, kind of surprised.

Yes, sed Pa's frend, & for two stars thay fought like a cuppel of beginners. I never saw Mike Gibney maik such a poor showing & the last star in the bisness that I wud expeck to disappoint me is Packy. Why, Packy fought like a floor walker trying to clean out a rough house. I'll bet he dident lead ten times in the whole fite.

Fite? sed Ma, was my husband in a fite?

No, sed Mister McGuire, but I bet he cud have licked either one of them stars last nite. He was with me. We went to see Mike Gibney & Packy McDonald fite at the club, sed Mister McGuire.

I thought you told me you were with Professor Rubber, looking at the stars, sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, I will confess, deerest, Pa looked awful cheep. Deerest, he sed, I went with Mac here & saw a boxing contest last nite. The two men that fought was stars, so I toald you I was looking at the stars, ha, ha. It was a little joak. Here is fifty dollars, deerest, Pa sed, that I won on Packy. Ha ha.

Then Ma took the fifty dollars & sed Ha Ha too.

FORBES URGES PHILOSOPHY IN BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

"I feel discouraged."

* * *

So said a young man to me the other day.

* * *

I offered congratulations this week to a member of a firm that has scored three notable financial achievements within the last month, achievements which have meant profits, I should think, of well over $1,000,000. And what, think you was his reply?

* * *

Here it is:

"Yes, we have been very fortunate. But we must not become too exultant, for things do not always go one way. We must accept successes as we would failures—philosophically. It is never wise to become too much puffed up when things go right, or to become too depressed when things don't go just right."

* * *

That wise observation, made by one of America's ablest men, I commend to my young friend.

* * *

It may be timely for others also, as many people have had to fight adversity during the last twelve months, and some are not yet at the top of the hill—the 2,000,000 unemployed in this coupntry must lie heavily on every thinking citizen's mind.

* * *

To offer words of encouragement to any healthy human being out of work and suffering the pangs of starvation were something of a mockery. Philosophy cannot fill an empty stomach. The man who is hungry has little taste for logic. To extend words of comfort to such were heartless. The man in dire need of bread cannot be expected to thank anyone for wind. Therefore, what I have to say is not intended for the unemployed and the hungry and the homeless.

* * *

My young friend was not one of these. He has a job—a good job for his age. He has his health. He has an education. He is an American. He has a home. He has friends. He has character. He has opportunity. He has energy. He has ambition. Success is not out of his reach.

* * *

For one so circumstanced to surrender to discouragement and despair is weak. It is cowardly. It is a reflection upon his mental makeup.

* * *

No man or woman conscious of having done his or her best, of having zealously grasped every opportunity, of having been faithful to himself or herself, can become wholly discouraged or give way to abject despair. If there be an inward "well done," the world cannot inject a sense of failure.

* * *

The only human being who can disgrace you is yourself.

* * *

The world cannot fill you with despair if you are buoyed up by knowledge of your own rectitude, by consciousness that you deserved to succeed. For if you have kept the faith, if you have played fair with yourself and with your fellowmen, if you have done your part manfully, consistently, steadfastly, then you have succeeded. You are not a failure. You are more of a success than many a millionaire. Your state of mind is more enviable than his. "Happiness is from within, not from without"—that's trite, but it is true, eternally the truth.

* * *

The young man conditioned as my friend is, instead of whining about being "discouraged" should have faith that in time he can move mountains.

* * *

He should be fired with enthusiasm. He should rise stronger in determination after every temporary defeat.

* * *

Often, of course, he will have to bite his lips, to clench his fist, to draw inspiration from his sense of worthiness.

* * *

Never must he carry his head too high when fortune smiles upon him. If he soars to the clouds he must expect to fall again to Mother Earth. With his pride must he blend humility, then the world cannot wound it. His foundations are beyond the reach of outward storms.

* * *

There is much in the world to pain and distress the heart of man. On all sides are suffering, disease, crime, cruelty and death. There are strife and backbiting and envy and jealousy and hatred. There is much loneliness; there is much lovelessness; there is much anguish of mind and soul. But if we know that we are doing all in our power to alleviate and remedy these matters we shall not feel overcome nor overpowered; we shall not give way to despair. We will fight on.

* * *

Hanging on the wall of a certain house I remember seeing an ornamental brass plate picturing the lolling, care-free members of the "Don't Worry Club" and inscribed: "This is God's world, boys, not ours." Without irreverence, I would recommend that reflection to those tempted to throw up the sponge.

* * *

To those who have youth and health, character and faith on their side there should be no such words as discouragement and despair.

* * *

Keep always in mind the story of Robert Bruce and the spider. It triumphed in the end.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were higher this afternoon, but gains ruled small and trading was dull and uninteresting in most respects. General Motors did not retain all its first hour advance, but was still up 2½ for common, although preferred had lost all of its advance and was a shade under yesterday's final price. American Ice was up 1½. Chesapeake & Ohio was below its best price of the morning, but was showing ⅛ gain. Other advances included Canadian Pacific ¼, Southern Pacific ⅜, Reading ¼, Lehigh Valley ⅛, American Telephone ⅛, American Can ⅜, Steel ⅜, Northern Pacific ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛ and Union Pacific ⅜. Amalgamated was unchanged.

In Boston New Haven was up ⅛ and Boston & Maine was ½ lower, while other declines included Elevated ½, United Fruit 1, Shoe common ⅜ and North Butte ⅜. Among mines Osceola had advanced 1½, Butte & Superior ⅛, Calumet & Arizona ¼ and Granby ⅝. American Telephone was a shade higher.

EARLY PRICES HIGHER.

There was a better tone to the New York market at the start, earliest prices averaging higher. Although it had been denied that President Wilson and Intestate Commerce Commissioner Clark had discussed the rate case at the White House conference, Wall street appeared to have an inkling that something had happened to impell the Interstate Commerce Commission to expedition in rendering a decision. During the morning a Washington dispatch stated that a decision on the plea of Eastern roads for increase of 5 per cent. on freight rates would be rendered before the commission took a Summer recess on June 15. Commissioner Harlan made the statement at a hearing given shippers, explaining that the delay was partly due to failure of the roads to file all evidence they wished to offer in support of their petition.

BUSINESS WAS QUIET.

Although the market was stronger at the start it was not active. This was to some extent due to the storm, which did not promote ease in wire communication and had a tendency to keep people away from commission houses and exchanges. Fluctuations were narrow in most instances, although General Motors was an exception, the common issue rising more than five points within thirty minutes. The most prominent speculative stocks showed fractional gains, with few exceptions, during the first hour. Bears renewed pressure upon Great Northern preferred and it declined a fraction. The short interest in Steel and Union Pacific is said to have become particularly heavy. Both advanced. A few specialties besides General Motors were strong. American Ice sold above 30 on the strength of a rumor that dividends were to be resumed. Rumely preferred was in more demand because of the announcement that it was in a better position to finance current needs. The resume of steel trade conditions published by the Iron Age today helped promote confidence that there is a betterment in the industrial situation, taking the country as a whole. Americans were irregular in London during the morning, as well as dull.

TONE BECAME HEAVIER.

In the second hour in New York the tone became heavier, the market feeling the effect of professional sentiment, which, in spite of Commissioner Harlan's announcement regarding the rate case decision, continued to be bearish. Until the public resumes buying stocks most traders are of the opinion that there will be more profit for them on the short side.

By noontime more issues showed gains than losses, and among railroads Chesapeake & Ohio had risen more than a point. The market was inert, however. The volume of business has been slackening steadily for some time, indicating the need of such impetus as trading on a large scale from the outside. The gains by railroads this morning were small, but that they were general indicated more hope of favorable action in regard to the rate case. The impression widely obtains that President Wilson personally favors carriers being allowed some increase.

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN HERE.

Little interest was displayed in the local market, coppers being listless and business in them reflecting the stagnation reported in metal trade in this country so far as home demand is concerned. Boston & Maine was weak during the morning, but later recovered most of its decline. Uncertainty as to what is going to happen to the road continues to prevail. United Fruit fell a point, and the movement of American Telephone was narrow. In fact the Boston market presented very little to claim attention.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

London copper warrants were firm this morning, spot being up 3s. 9d. and futures 5s. at noon.

Railroad reports so far received this month show that gross earnings of the carriers for the second week of February average less than for the first week.

Net profits of the Standard Oil Company of California for 1913 were $19,386,140, as compared with $7,106,156 in 1912. This shows last year's profits to be equal to 42.9 per cent. on the corporation's $45,000,000 outstanding stock.

It is announced that the Rumely Company has received assurances of approximately $3,000,000 of the $4,000,000 needed to meet the seasonal requirements of the current year.

BILLS AIMED AT TRUSTS TO BE REVAMPED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—President Wilson and Attorney-General McReynolds had a two-hour conference at the White House examining in detail various bills pending before Congress dealing with the trust problem.

Some of the proposals in the tentative measures on which hearings are being held will be entirely revamped and others will be dropped, so as to make the legal machinery carrying out the proposed reforms as simple as possible.

The Attorney-General and the President are in agreement that the proposed Interstate Trade Commission can be made a valuable instrument for dealing with the trust problem, provided its powers are properly restricted.

The suggestion that the commission be not required to obtain reports from small organizations and concerns under $5,000,000 in capitalization is being favorably considered, and there is a general disposition on the part of the President and the Attorney-General to advise that the new legislation should not interfere with the ordinary combinations or partnerships of small concerns.

Both the President and Mr. McReynolds realize there are a multitude of decisions already on the Sherman law, and they desire not to add in any way to judicial complications over the trust law.

Some of the proposed specific additions to the law relating to price-fixing may be dropped entirely, and prevention of evils arising in this connection may be left to the Department of Justice for prosecution as at present.

MAKING LAKES FROM RIVERS

Changing a Small Stream Into a Vast Artificial Lake of 164 Square Miles.

The march of progress is often remorseless in the manner of overcoming obstacles which lie in its path. Discomforts and privations to the few are not considered when the final object is to benefit the millions.

The creation of a vast artificial lake, thereby submerging plantations, villages and towns, was one of the many difficult undertakings in connection with the building of the Panama canal. This is undoubtedly the largest artificial body of water anywhere in the world. The Chagres river which feeds this lake is but 180 feet at its widest point, yet the damming of it has created an inland sea of 164 square miles in extent, the surface of which is 185 feet above tide water.

Surveyors found that this bothersome stream crossed the route of the proposed canal at twenty-six points within a distance of fifteen miles. To dredge this stream and allow the canal to follow its tortuous course was out of the question. Vessels are now able to steam through the lake in a straight course, under full headway, and through a channel 500 to 1,000 feet wide, varying from 45 to 85 feet in depth.

This is but one of the hundreds of interesting facts about the canal construction. The history of the Republic of Panama provides a varied and intensely interesting narrative.

Every phase of Panama life and development are fully treated in the big book, "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose," which will be distributed for a short time by The AMERICAN. Every one of its 450 pages carries graphic photographs of the scenes described, taken by special photographers who frequently braved distinct dangers to secure the negatives.

In another column of this issue will be found a Panama certificate, which explains fully how you can get this book for a fraction of its real value

BULGAR WOMEN GIVEN WORK TO PURCHASE FOOD

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Miss Kate MacQueen, whose experience in helping the Bulgarian refugees have been recounted in the AMERICAN, has found a new way to help the poor destitutes. Her idea is to re-establish the native industries which were ruined by the war.

Accordingly, some months ago, she allotted a sum of money for the purchase of materials for the women's cottage industries. Some hundreds of women were thus set to work, all being refugees, widows or ophans.

A month ago Miss MacQueen commenced to collect the finished work. This has all arrived in London, and a sale will be held in a private house here on March 5, when it is hoped a large sum will be realized. Curtains, mats, dresses and basket work made by the Bulgarian women will be sold. Wages for the work have been paid to the women, and the profits will be devoted to fresh purchases of materials, which can be spread over a larger area.

Mrs. MacQueen told the AMERICAN correspondent today: "It will be a good thing if some of the funds collected in America can be put to this purpose. Of course, at the present moment food and clothing are the vital necessities for these unfortunate people, who are dying like sheep, but it is essential to avoid any idea of pauperization. The best way to prevent this is to aid them to restart by their own work. Physical relief comes first, but this is a good second."

Small Fares Fail to Relieve Fish Famine

The fish famine caused by the North Atlantic storms was but little relieved when the Matthew S. Greer and two other schooners brought total fares of 78,000 pounds of cod and haddock to T wharf today.

The buyers would have taken a million pounds. Prices jumped accordingly. Steak cod went for 14½ cents per pound, haddock for 8½.

FEDERAL BOARD FINDS COUNTRY IS PROSPEROUS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The Federal Reserve Bank Organization Committee has returned to Washington after a five-weeks' trip through the country, and announces that its selection of Federal Reserve cities and definition of reserve districts will not be made until careful consideration is given to the information accumulated on the trip.

The statement said the committee, Secretaries McAdoo and Houston, found the country prosperous and learned that bankers and business men are greatly interested in the new banking system and confident of its success.

In a supplemental statement Mr. McAdoo declared he hoped the new system would be established in time to take care of crop moving contingencies next year, but that if it were not, the Treasury Department would stand ready to place its funds again at the disposal of business men.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

"We have spent practically from the fourth of January to the present time," the committee's statement says, "in hearing the views of business men and bankers on the problem of dividing the country into not less than eight nor more than twelve districts and of locating in each district the main office of a Federal Reserve Bank. Of the two questions, the division of the country into districts is the more important and difficult.

"The committee was presented everywhere with overwhelming evidence of the enormous economic strength of the country and of the rapid progress of every section. The fact that the Nation's banking resources as a whole make enormous advances every twelve or fifteen years, approximately doubling in each such period, was made evident; while this is true of the country as a whole, is was shown that certain sections are advancing with more rapid strides than others and that the country is fundamentally exceptionally sound and strong economically.

"GROWTH IS AMAZING."

"The facts and figures submitted to the committee in every part of the country show amazing growth and strength and disclosed a condition of financial, industrial, commercial and agricultural soundness and prosperity that leaves no doubt as to the future.

"The committee was impressed by the frank admission of bankers throughout the country that the present banking system not only encourages, but actually has created striking artificial conditions of banking.

"With practical unanimity the opinion was expressed that the new measure will restore normal conditions with great resulting benefits; that the present system not only furnishes no protection in times of real stringency, but also even in times of great prosperity, especially when there are bounteous crops, makes it impossible to meet the conditions; and that there has been presented the singular contradiction of having bankers thrown into fear of a panic by the emergencies of wealth."

HOW TO ENTERTAIN AT DINNER.

NOW JUST RUN DOWN THIS BIG CLOCK PUZZLE

Here, you puzzle solvers. Wind up your mental springs and run down the intricate AMERICAN clock puzzle. Thousands are doing all sorts of mental contortions in their endeavor to take a fall out of this latest brain twister. If you haven't tried to solve this clock puzzle, you haven't really lived. Only those people live who exercise their mental machinery. Are you on? Then here's the problem:

"If a calendar clock, which indicates the second, minute, hour and the day of the month shows the correct time at 5 p. m. on Saturday, January 17, and gains 10 minutes daily, what will be the correct time when the clock indicates that it is 5 p. m. on February 17?"

'Dress Agitation Is Useless,' Says Bishop

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 19.—The Right Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, today said: "The agitation about woman's dress and modern dances is useless. They have a right to dress as they please, and it is my belief that a respectable woman is going to remain respectable and conduct herself in a respectable manner whether on the street or in the ball room. If a woman is not respectable, agitation will not make her so."

Governor Walsh Speaks with the Voice of New England. Her Rights Must Be Preserved in the Settlement of the Railroad Question

Governor Walsh is right if he is correctly reported to have said that there ought to be no agreement between the National Government and the New Haven Railroad, concerning the surrender of the latter's control of the Boston & Maine, which does not preserve absolutely the rights of Massachusetts under existing law.

It has been the resistance by intelligent men and organizations in Massachusetts, while all about her were supine and pusillanimous that has brought this unlawful transportation monopoly to its knees and has stopped the graft tainting the whole system from the Morgan banking house down.

Massachusets cannot give up any advantages she may have in this situation, not advantages over any other State, but over the railroads.

Governor Walsh is also right in resisting any proposition like ten years in which to compel the sale of the New Haven's holdings in the Boston & Maine's stock. The demand for ten years is a palpable bluff, and they don't expect to get half that period of grace. Naturally they want the longest possible time in which to disgorge, for they feel that every day's delay is a day of hope that something may happen to save them from the necessity of disgorging at all.

May Governor Walsh have wisdom and strength in the great task he is performing. He is the voice of the people of New England, and their voice has not been heard in railroad circles for many a year.

Are We Really Short of Ammunition for the Army and Navy?

Then Why Not Stop the Nonsense of Firing Foolish Salutes? What Congressman WILL Stop It?

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

We are told by the head of the United States Army that everything is wrong about our fighting machine—incidentally, that we lack ammunition.

Ammunition includes powder.

Why does not somebody stop the idiotic, monkey-like waste of money and ammunition that goes on every day in the firing of salutes in the navy?

Does this country gain anything by spending tens of thousands —and perhaps hundreds of thousands—of dollars a year in firing salutes every time some little naval nobody goes from ship to shore or from shore to ship?

Why should we burn up powder saluting vessels from foreign countries that pass our ships?

Why should guns be fired at great expense every time the President appears within sight of a man-of-war?

This is A REPUBLIC, not an institution run to gratify the vanity of popinjays dressed in uniform.

We suggest to the men in Congress who think, and who believe that the people are more important than the vanity of Army and Navy, that the waste of ammunition in foolish salute be investigated AND STOPPED.

How much does it cost to fire salutes?

What is the expense of discharging with a loud noise all of the big guns on the battle fleet when a cheerful, fat President like Mr. Taft or a less cheerful, thin President like Mr. Wilson condescends to go out and look at the people's property?

Wouldn't it be well enough to dip a flag, or blow a trumpet, or beat a drum in honor of the distinguished President, or the distinguished little admiral, native or foreign, INSTEAD OF SPENDING MONEY WASTING GUNPOWDER?

We surely don't need imitation of war in this country. What we need IS TO BE PREPARED FOR WAR.

The spending of money and gunpowder might as well be stopped now.

What we spend uselessly and waste in foolish noise each year would soon pile up into all the ammunition needed.

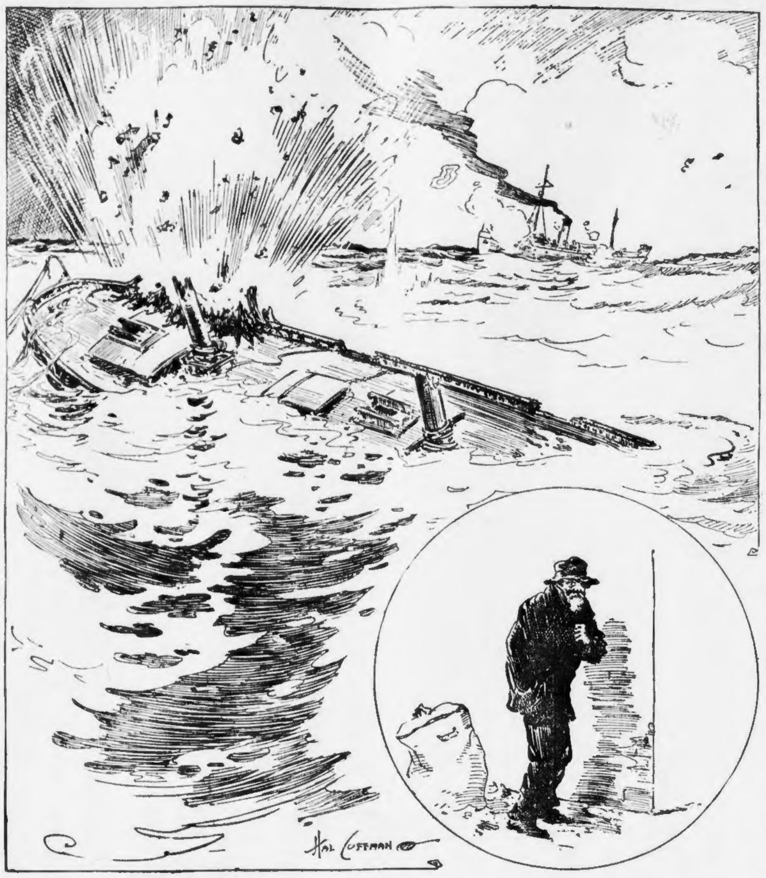
✤ Questions Answered ✤

J. M. L.—You would do well to take no stock in the old notion that 13 is an "unlucky" number. The idea that it is such is merely a superstition, and like all other superstitions, is born of crass ignorance. Stop for just a minute and seriously ask yourself the question, "Why should the number 13 be unlucky?" and the chances are, provided you have good sense, that you will no longer cherish the old idea.

B. H.—Yes, there is a very emphatic provision in the Constitution of the United States against any union of Church and State in this nation. Article 1, amendment 1, reads as follows: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for redress of grievances." Uncle Sam has his own religion and he is willing for everybody else to have theirs, but he will not enter into copartnership with any religion. He is too wise for that.

T. C. S.—The formal opening of the Panama Canal is set for January 1, 1915. At that time the available battleships of the navy will pass into procession through the canal. Colonel Goethals, who has had charge of the construction work, gives it as his opinion that ships will not be able to pass through the canal regularly before May 1, 1914.

DERELICTS---AFLOAT AND ASHORE



Only when an abandoned ship is beyond salvage does the revenue cutter Seneca, maintained by the government for this sole purpose, sink the hulk as a "menace to navigation." When possible it is brought into port. The human derelict, uncaptained by Will, drifts on the current of life, useless to himself and a menace to others. No Seneca can tow him to port; others may lend a helping hand, but the salvage of the man depends upon the awakening of his own spirit.

Taking Bearings from Polaris

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"WHEN a surveyor takes his bearings from Polaris does the star move, and if so can this be plainly seen through the telescope on the ordinary transit?"

A.—The earth turns on its axis once in 86,163.6 seconds. The length of a mean solar day is 86,400 seconds. The absolute or sidereal day is therefore 236.4 seconds, or 3 minutes 56.4 seconds shorter than the solar.

This motion of rotation is from west over to the east, from right over to the left, or from the figures 1 over through 12 to 11 on the face of a watch if held back toward the equator, or toward the south by any observer in any north latitude. Then all stars appear to move in the opposite direction.

Our present north star—Polaris—is no exception. The only exceptions would be two stars at the mathematically exact celestial north and south poles. Unfortunately for surveyors and navigators, there is none. And this fact has made a vast amount of mathematics necessary in all historic ages.

Our present north star is constantly drawing, so it seems, nearer to the precise celestial pole, and will so appear to move until A. D. 2120, when the nearest possible approach will be 30 minutes, or one-half degree of arc. Then it will recede, reach its maximum distance in 12,939 years and begin its return sweep in cosmic space, and be distant 30 minutes again in the grand period of 25,878 years, the actual length of one cosmic or precessional period, one earth gyration.

The ablest observers and micro-measurers in the world have measured and watched Polaris since the discovery of the telescope, in 16[illegible], and with from ten to a hundred times greater accuracy since the perfection of the present refined micrometer within the last fifty years. The rate of approach of the axis of the earth to the direction of the Star of the North is between 19.6 and 19.7 seconds of arc per year. And this degree of accuracy in extremely minute measurement has elicited the admiration of all students of the magnificent laws of Nature.

The motion is that of the entire globe—the earth—which makes its axis appear to sweep around in a colossal circle 47 degrees in diameter in the Annus Magnus, or Great Year. On January 1, 1914, the axis of the earth prolonged to very infinity would have passed Polaris at a distance of 1 degree 8 minutes 51.3 seconds. Thus in one sidereal, or star day, the North Star appears to traverse an exact circle of twice this in diameter, or 2 degrees 17 minutes 42.6 seconds. Therefore the star must actually pass once above and once below the axis in the true star day. But when exactly above or below, Polaris is in a very valuable place, the celestial and terrestrial meridian.

I have never been able to see Polaris in the daytime in the telescope of any surveyor's transit, but up here in the great telescope the polar star is an easy object even at noon in the most brilliant sunshine. People living away from the glare of the electric light of cities can always tell of the approach of Polaris to the meridian at night by watching the star Alioth, the first one from the bowl of the Great Dipper, or third from the end of the handle.

From a stick nailed to the corner of a house, say fifteen or twenty feet high, let fall a plumb-line with bob in a bucket of water to prevent the wind causing it to oscillate. Stand south of the plumb-line, look toward the north, watch Alioth; then, when this star and Polaris are on the line, drive stakes in a line to the south, and you will have a very rough location of the meridian.

The Trial of Warren Hastings

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE trial of Warren Hastings, one hundred and twenty-six years ago, will probably ever remain the most memorable in the annals of British jurisprudence.

The speech of Sheridan, the most electrical in its effect, perhaps, of any that was ever delivered by man; Burke's almost superhuman oration, closing with the never-to-be-forgotten words: "Therefore hath it with all confidence been ordered by the Commons of Great Britain that I impeach Warren Hastings of high crimes and misdemeanors," the atmosphere of solemnity pervading the place, which was intensified rather than weakened by the deep murmurs of the various emotions of the assembly, and in the midst of it all Hastings himself, calm as the Sphinx, with the look of confidence which seemed to say, "Come one, come all, this rock shall fly from its firm base as soon as I," furnished a picture the like of which it is impossible to duplicate in all history.

Of course, the spectacular 6th of February could not be repeated every day, but the trial that day begun lasted until April, 1795, when the illustrious defendant was triumphantly acquitted of the "high crimes and misdemeanors" of which, seven years before, Burke had, in such dramatic fashion, accused him in the august name of the Commons of England.

Long ago as all this was, its moral is still fresh and pertinent. Warren Hastings was the very accomplished and most capable tool of a system of exploitation that is still by no means extinct among men. Hastings was at one and the same time innocent and guilty. He was, in a word, just as innocent and just as guilty as the government that put him on trial.

If that government had the moral right to be in India, then Hastings was entitled to claim that he was innocent of any charge of crime, since he was simply the government's agent in carrying out its Indian program. The worst that can be said of Hastings is that in a most masterly way he played the great game according to the rules of the day—and it would have been a piece of rank injustice to have punished him for doing the very things he was ordered and expected to do.

The Destruction of Birds and Animals—Inventive Milliners and Furriers Are Now Producing Beautiful Substitutes for Furs and Plumage

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

WOMAN is slow in her growth toward the standard of life, which illustrates in her daily and hourly conduct the kindness and the sympathy which are supposed to be her chief characteristics. Never was this fact more clearly and painfully illustrated than in the anger and rebellion which the majority of women exhibited when the law forbidding the importing or wearing of aigrettes and plumage of dead birds was enforced.

There was a resounding cry against the tyranny of American law and much sarcastic comment on the land of the free.

Women who occupied high positions socially and in artistic circles felt their rights had been infringed upon, and they were loud in denunciation of the law which interfered with their privilege to aid and abet the destruction of song birds and birds of beautiful plumage.

The very fact that it requires a law to prevent women from inciting wholesale slaughter of these glorious little creatures is a reflection on the sex.

But the enforcing of this law has awakened new brain cells in the inventive organs of men and women milliners, and we are seeing most attractive hats composed of materials which are far more hygienic and more exquisite than portions of dead birds, and which allow a greater variety of taste to be displayed in millinery skill.

And now come the "vegetarian furs."

Whenever there is an insistent demand for anything in this world it creates a supply.

The growth of the humane societies and the spirit of humanitarianism has given a remarkable impetus to the vegetarian organization.

Where once there were ten "queer people" to be met who ate no corpses, there are a thousand today.

And where ten years ago the menu of the vegetarian was a most limited and melancholy one, today it is rich in variety and appetizing in taste and excellent in its nourishing results.

The writer recently met a man of thirty-eight who was in magnificent health; virile, handsome and possessed of a most brilliant mind. An orator and a thinker of unusual power, this man had never in his life tasted meat, fish, fowl, eggs, coffee, alcoholic drinks or tobacco.

He was born and bred in India, and his simple diet of fruit, vegetables, cereals and milk (with an occasional dissipation in a cup of weak tea) had sufficed to make him what he was in brain and body. The vegetarians have often been confused when confronted by the seeming necessity of furs in cold weather to protect the body from icy winds and zero temperature.

As among their members they number many women of fashion, they have also realized the difficulty of convincing the "eternal feminine" that it was as heartless to wear the hide and hair of the slaughtered animal as to eat his flesh.

But the growing conviction that the vegetarian must be consistent has created another supply to answer this demand, and the "vegetarian furs" are today worn by many a modish woman who would scorn to appear in public looking old-fashioned.

These furs are the beginning of a new and profitable industry, and are as lovely, warm and becoming as the most expensive skins of animals. Now from England comes the word that a new invention is on the market which makes a "vegetarian shoe sole" a possibility. And vegetarian leather for slippers rivals the finest kid.

The Humane and S. P. C. A. societies are issuing a little button to be sold and worn by children bearing the motto, "Kindness to Animals."

Every effort made to interest children in this subject should be met with encouragement by their elders.

Send to the Humane Society, No. 45 Milk street, Boston, Mass., for a dollar's worth of buttons and literature which will enable you to instruct your children and other children in the Religion of Kindness.

That is the religion needed in the world today.

"A Sidelight on the Suffragettes"

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D., LL. D.

A CURIOUS sidelight is thrown upon the history of suffragette violence in England by the latest reports of male rowdyism which have reached this country.

From Liverpool comes the report of a meeting which to a person unfamiliar with English life is so amazing as to be almost unbelievable. Anti-Vivisectionists, that is to say, persons who believe that further restrictions should be placed by law upon surgical experiments tried upon living animals, had hired a hall and advertised a meeting for the advocacy of their views. This is how the report begins:

"Much interruption and disorder was created by a company of medical and veterinary students from Liverpool University. The speakers were persistently interrupted by shouts and caterwaulings, and towards the end of the proceedings an old man, who was in sympathy with the objects of the meeting, was struck by one of the students. An exciting scene ensued, several persons rushing between the old man and his assailant to prevent a renewal of violence. Police prevented further outbreaks of violence."

Before anything which the most frenzied imagination could regard as provocative was said—before, indeed, a word was spoken from the platform—the chairman was greeted by derisive shouts and yells. It transpired that a notice had been posted in the university, not, of course, by any person in authority, calling upon the students to attend the meeting and create disorder. When at the close of the meeting a lady rose to "move a vote of thanks to the chairman," a duty which the etiquette of English public meetings regards as essential, the brutality reached its climax and the fight described took place.

Properly to understand this we must visualize it as though happening in one of our own cities. It becomes unthinkable.

The lady in question has been long and honorably associated with the public life of Liverpool. She is an acknowledged social leader. She has given generously of her time and money to good causes. She has devoted conspicuous ability to the best interests of the city.

Let us try to imagine a meeting called there to advocate, say, the Eight Hours Law for Undergraduate Nurses. Let us suppose that some well-known woman is called upon for a purely formal statement from the platform. What would be thought in our Western world if hundreds of university students greeted the lady with yells and catcalls and howled her down.

The answer is that it cannot be supposed, because it could not happen. There could not be found a sufficient number of cads in all the universities of America.

* * *

But this is no new thing in the life of Liverpool. Years ago a great function had been arranged by what is now the University of Liverpool. The guest of honor was Earl Spencer. He had filled the most distinguished positions under the Crown which a statesman may attain—all save one. He was at various times First Lord of the Admiralty, Lord President of the Council and through eight stormy years Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

But no! The students cared for none of these things. I have never seen on a human face the expression of more hopelessly perplexed amazement than the "red earl" manifested when he received the welcome of the students. Yells, shouts, stamping, braying, broke in upon his ears. For a few minutes he withstood the onslaught. He spoke briefly. The real speech he came to make was never made.

The beginnings of militancy are rooted in these English methods of disturbing public meetings. The suffragettes began by doing nothing but interrupt a speaker, not with yells, with hissing or with oaths, but by questions, "What about votes for women?" and the like. They were treated with gross brutality. As they continued their tactics at meetings all over England the violence of the incensed supporters of the meetings increased. Then women were the victims. We sympathized with them and when they went to prison we gloried in their courage and devotion.

Thus, naturally, has militancy developed.
